No-Till Corn Did Well In Drought; This Year, Promises Good Yields

ANDY ANDREWS

MARIETTA (Lancaster Co.) — Last year about this time, Bob Hess remembers watching corn on fields throughout Lancaster County begin the slow, agonizing process of drying up.

A promising, wet spring turned into a drought disaster, with millions of dollars in crop loss.

But he was surprised. Hess, who finishes about 5,200 hogs on a wean-to- finish format for Hershey Ag, used 100 percent no-till on rented ground.

As a result, he was able to fill both silos with corn silage and high-moisture shelled corn readily. Sometimes, he saw 138 bushels of corn per acre — way above the average for most farms.

The key? Simply no-tilling the ground kept the soil from heating and readily evaporating the precious moisture. The residue

Tour Of Weaber Mill Reveals Importance Of Timber To Pennsylvania Economy

ANNVILLE (Lebanon Co.) — "The only way you can pass the forest on is to use it. You can't keep it," said Galen Weaber.

Weaber, president and CEO of Weaber Inc., welcomed several members of the news media to a tour designed to showcase Pennsylvania's hardwood and timber industry. The tour was not meant to showcase Weaver but highlight hardwood production, forest resources, the importance of hardwood renewability, and how the wood resources are utilized.

Weaber, Inc., founded in 1941, is a two-generation, family-owned business. Weaber Inc. employs more than 500 people and covers 170 acres. The day included a summary of the timbering business from industry representatives, a tour of the mill, and a visit to two local harvesting sites.

The Industry

Representatives from several industry organizations also joined the tour. For example, Paul Lyskava represented the Hardwoods Development Council, a bureau within the Pennsylvania Department of

Recently Weaber Inc., a large-scale wood harvester and manufacturer, hosted a tour of the mill and nearby timbering sites. Here Chief Forester Dennis Brehm points out the wedge method used to directionally fell the trees. The stumps are cut as close to the ground as possible to utilize the best lumber on the tree. Photo by Michelle Ranck

Money Made Available For Plum Pox

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Editor

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The U.S. Department of Agriculture is providing up to $13.2 million to compensate Pennsylvania fruit growers who must destroy trees infected or exposed to the plum pox virus. This news came Thursday, from a release that originated in the office of vice president Al Gore. The only way to control the disease is to destroy trees infected or exposed to the virus.

"Plum pox potentially could devastate the United States' 1 8 billion stone fruit industry," Gore said. "These growers deserve support because they have

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers and heifers closed 2.00-2.50 lower. The bottom dropped out of the fat cattle market both locally and in the Midwest as each day of trading brought lower prices. It seems retailers have already stocked their shelves for next week's holiday and there is no driving demand around the corner. However, live cattle futures for June have promised these lower price levels for months. Northern feedlots sold cattle 2.00 lower live and 2.00-3.00 lower dressed at 67.00 and mostly 107.00, High Plains feedyards had yet to trade by Friday morning but seemed destined for the same. Local Holstein steers traded mostly 1.50 lower. Slaughter cows sold mostly steady with last week's high levels, but big fleshy cows (less than 85 pct lean) turned 1.00 lower late in the week. The slaughter bulls continued

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Grain and soybean bids were mostly lower after higher trends yesterday. Wheat harvest resumed in some areas, weighing on bids. Light export wheat purchase by CCC overnight was reported. Corn bids fell sharply lower on light profit taking and weather forecasts calling for more rains and milder temperatures after the 4th. Soybean bids were mixed, but mostly lower. Crops continue to benefit from scattered rainfall in the Midwest regions and are looking good most places. Soybean meal prices declined due to smaller than expected soy oil stocks and strong domestic consumption. Lack of fresh export sales this week has added pressure to corn and bean bids. Wheat steady to 4 cents lower. Corn 2 to 8 cents lower. Sorghum 7 cents lower. Soybeans mixed, mostly 8 to 10 cents lower except Kansas City 3 cents higher.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JULY 3-9, 2000

DOG DAYS BEGIN, JULY 3.

SUMMER ROSES

Gather ye rosebuds while ye may" for summer is fleeting, and the roses will bloom and fade Not everyone loves the lovely rose, however Poet Dorothy Parker (1893-1967) penned, peevishly, "Why is it no one ever sent me yet / One perfect limousine, do you suppose? / Ah no, it's always just my luck to get / One perfect rose." Elizabeth Graeme Ferguson (1737-1801) wrote of the damask rose "A transient, rich, and balmy sweet / Is in thy fragrance found " Today, however, even the scents of the fragrant varieties—damask, gallica, musk, alba, etc —have been mixed and diffused by hybrids Willa Cather believed that the fleeting quality of the rose was its best calling card. "Oh, this is the joy of the rose " she wrote, "That it blows, / And goes "

Any nose/May ravage with impunity a rose.

–Robert Browning

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Although modern floribunda roses often lack fragrance, most climbing roses have at least some scent.

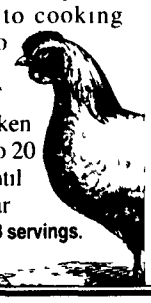
MARINATED ROSEMARY CHICKEN

3 tablespoons olive oil
1/4 cup fresh lemon juice
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 teaspoons chopped fresh rosemary leaves
4 sage leaves, chopped
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
8 skinless chicken breast halves

Whisk together the first eight ingredients, then dip chicken breasts into marinade, coating both sides Place chicken into a shallow roasting pan, cover, and refrigerate for up to 24 hours prior to cooking When ready to bake, preheat oven to 375°F and bake chicken for about 15 to 20 minutes, or until juices run clear

Makes 8 servings.



The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

As Dog Days commence (July 3), so they end.

When a rainbow appears in wind's eye, rain is sure to follow.

If anthills are high in July, the coming winter will be hard and long.

OPINION

An Apple A Day

"An apple a day keeps the doctor away." We have all heard this saying and now there is scientific evidence it is really a fact.

Food scientists at Cornell University have found that it is the phytochemicals in the flesh of the apple but even more so in the skin, that provides the fruit's anti-oxidant and anti-cancer benefits. Their laboratory study funded by the New York Apple Research Development Program and the New York Apple Association is published in the June 22 issue of the journal Nature.

Actually there is no single compound in the apple responsible for this medicinal advantage. It is the combination of flavonoids and polyphenols that do the work.

The researchers used red delicious apples grown in New York State to provide the extracts for the study. Using colon cancer cells treated with apple extract, the scientists found that cell proliferation was inhibited. Colon cancer cells treated with 50 milligrams of apple extract (from the skins) were inhibited by 43 percent. Other combinations of extract and cancer cells gave various results but all were significantly positive.

So there you have it. Eat your apples or call the doctor. Which will it be?

Now Is The Time

To Check Fields For Blue Mold

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent, blue mold has been found in Lancaster County.

There have been confirmed cases of active blue mold in Manheim and Pequea with possibly many more sites.

Thus far, blue mold has been confined to small areas in the field.

We are experiencing perfect weather for blue mold spread and growth. You should check your tobacco fields and spray them to protect noninfected tobacco plants.

Also, check the Pennsylvania Blue Mold Hotline for updates. This year the toll-free number is (888) 632-8590.

To Wear Long Sleeves When Mixing Pesticides

Pesticide users can eliminate as much as 98 percent of their exposure by wearing long-sleeved shirts and chemically resistant gloves when mixing pesticides, according to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent.

Research shows the contamination that lands on the body during pesticide mixing and loading, 85 percent is on your hands and 13 percent is on your forearms.

Most applicators know the importance of wearing gloves when handling pesticides. However, use inspections have found that many applicators are not protecting their forearms.

The solution is simple. If you use pesticides, go to your closet and pull out a long-sleeved shirt that you can dedicate to pesticide handling. Place the shirt with the rest of your personal protective equipment. Wear it for pesticide handling. Wash it separately from the family laundry.

Check the label each time you use a pesticide. If you are handling products that bear a warning or danger signal word, wear chemically resistant forearm protectors over your long sleeves.

Always read and follow all the recommendations on the label.

To Keep Cows Cool

Dairy farmers know that nothing cuts milk production like a few days of 90-degrees-plus weather. Tunnel ventilation has helped to cut the hot weather milk slump dramatically.

However, when you turn on the fans, remember whom you are trying to keep cool.

Air will take the shortest route from the intake to the fan. Try to make that route pass over as many cows as possible.

Keep an eye on cows in the corner. They may be missing out on the tunnel ventilation. A few smaller overhead fans may help to improve these dead zones of air movement.

Cows' bodies are a heat furnace. Some farmers have tried to wet or mist their cows on hot days. If you are going to spray water on your cows, make sure you have some fans blowing across the cows. If you just wet the cows, you end up steaming them rather than cooling them.

Also, if you are going to wet cows, put enough water on to wet the skin, not just the hair coat. Cows obviously need plenty of water on hot days.

Keeping water bowls clean and fresh will encourage cows to drink more often.

UNCONSCIOUSLY RICH

Background Scripture:
Ephesians 1.
Devotional Reading:
Romans 1:8-17.

There is a story about a man who lived all his life in poverty.

Illegitimate by birth and an orphan since the age of three, he had no known family and no friends. Finally, dying in a charity hospital, he was visited by a lawyer who told him that he had been searching for him for 20 years. "For me?" the poor man gasped. 'Yes," replied the lawyer, "your father was a prominent and wealthy man. Twenty years ago he realized he had made a grievous error in not acknowledging you as his son. Shortly before he died, he charged me to find you because he was leaving you his entire estate."

It was several moments before the dying man said, "Imagine that — for 20 years I've been a millionaire and I didn't know it!"

Many of us, like that man, are unconsciously rich. It is bad enough to live in poverty, but so much worse to be rich and not know it.

In the letter to the church at Ephesus, the author speaks of 'the riches of his grace which he lavished upon us" (1:7,8), and again of "the riches of his glorious inheritance in the saints" (1:18). It may be difficult for many of us to think of ourselves as having ". . . riches . . . lavished upon us."

Unless we habitually count our blessings, we tend to evaluate our lives, not in terms of what we have, but in terms of what we do not have. It is this focus that keeps us from realizing and enjoying what we do have — a priceless inheritance from God the Father.

A Plus Balance

Unlike the "unconscious millionaire," we do not have to be found by a messenge,r for we already have heard the Good News of our inheritance. Even though our bank accounts may total zero and our credit card statements show a creeping indebtedness, we are still incredibly rich.

And what is this inheritance worth? Actually, God's bequest to you is immeasurable. Behind each of his many blessings there are so many zeros and commas that they run right off your balance sheet.

Whatever your indebtedness — monetary or moral — your inheritance from God always leaves you with a plus balance.

Ephesians spells out the specifics. Perhaps we fail to recognize the lavish riches because they utterly defy a dollar value. We can say "one billion dollars," but we cannot comprehend the meaning of it. Even less can we comprehend the riches of God's grace.

For example, how can we put a monetary value on the fact that God created us to enjoy this wealth of spiritual blessings? Ephesians says that God "chose us in him (Christ) before the foundation of the world that we should be holy and blameless before him. He destined us in love to be his sons through Jesus Christ . . . ." (1:45). Unfortunately, this text has sometimes been misinterpreted to mean that some of us are destined by God to be saved, while other are destined to be damned.

But the writer neither says nor suggests that only some are destined and not others. His implication is that all of us are destined to be saved and to be recipients of his inheritance.

A few verses later, the writer explicitly says that the plan of God is to "unite all (my italics) things in him, things in heaven and things on earth" (1:10). All things, not just some.

Predestined

All of us, then, are destined to have his redemption and forgiveness — although not all of us may accept that gift. Life is a mystery, but he means for us to understand that mystery, to realize that this purpose is to unite us with himself. "We...have been destined and appointed to live for the praise of his glory."

What is it all about? Why are we here? The answer: to live our lives so that God is glorified.

As we get older we realize just how short and fleeting is this life on earth. These brief years make sense only if we see them as our opportunity to glorify God. But with the task of glorifying God comes the means to accomplish it: ". . . you also . . . were sealed with the promised Holy Spirit which is the guarantee of our inheritance until we acquire possession of it . . ." (1:14).

The more we realize this, the more we become consciously rich.

Want Good Alfalfa? Watch The Soil pH

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co) — When it comes to his alfalfa crop farmer Joe Weimer of Somerset said nothing is more critical than maintaining a pH balance of 6 5 to 7

"The main thing is to keep an eye on the pH ' Weimer said

Weimer usually sends a test to Penn State or to the University of Virginia On old plantings he runs a soil sample about every third or fourth year However with new seedings, it is critical to run a soil sample right away In two or three weeks the results will come back

If the indicators show the soil pH is low lime it

' Usually good alfalfa would take 1,000 pounds to a ton a year,

Weimer said ' I have a lime spreader so I spread it myself

Weimer prefers using hydrated lime because it goes to work the same season which is pretty fast Weimer said the lime application will last 4 to 5 years

"I like to get six to seven years out of seed, ' Weimer said ' When the alfafa comes out I go into two years of corn before I go back into alfalfa '

The rotation works out well and allows some 12 to 20 acres of new alfalfa seedings to go in every year

The fundamental thing about alfalfa is to avoid wet spots cautioned Weimer Right now his own acreage has one vulnerable area where a wet spot is troublesome

You won't often see a scene such as this Joe Weimer holds a plant showing deep root growth—the alfalfa was finally able to locate some moisture during the 1999 drought. By coincidence, a cave-in found near a county road revealed a natural underground water course next to Joe Weimer's alfalfa crop. Photo by Gay Brownlee

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co) — Milk is the original "neutraceutical" or nutrient-pharmaceutical that can protect the human body, science has proven

Simply put, milk harbors conjugated linoleic acid (CLA), a fatty acid present in milk that can fight certain types of cancer Milk contains about 4-6 milligrams of CLA per gram of fat (cheese, too)

And pasture scientists are showing that cows fed high amounts of forages, including those from pasture, can increase CLA in milk by 2 3 percent, noted Larry Muller, Penn State dairy scientist, at last month's Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Holiday Inn in Grantville

Muller spoke on a session focusing on value-added dairy markets

These days, dairy farmers are struggling with volatile prices, increased input costs, decreasing margins, and they receive a smaller percentage of the retail price Beverage consumption, particularly soft drinks is on the rise

More than ever farmers must consider the end users of the products. And those end users — consumers — are looking for the "pharma" foods that can add to a healthy lifestyle

CLAs are found in unsaturated fat Already dairy science (through a Penn State pilot project) has found that, through management of nutrients to the cow, the proportion of the saturated or bad fat can be decreased, and unsaturated fat in creased

In the future, CLA amounts could potentially be more carefully controlled The same CLAs have

Harrisburg

I have recently been involved with helping to conduct several grazing schools in the Harrisburg area As I was conducting some classroom discussions on several agronomic topics, it became evident to me that even though several of the subjects were designed for beginning grazers they were points that many experienced graziers may need to revisit I will address several of those topics in this column

When dealing with agronomic principles of grazing, we need to think about the basic unit of production – the tiller or individual plant When we have a population of tillers they are called a sward It is the number and size of tillers in a sward that makes up the total yield of dry matter, either as hay silage or pasture We need to make sure that we care for these fillers by providing a proper growing environment with all the essential nutrients such as nitrogen, phosphorous and potassium, in a soil with the optimum pH level We also need to provide the tiller with proper management and that basically in

Nutra-Flo FOLIAR PLANT FOOD ...the Yield Booster!

Completely Safe, Will Not Burn Plants

Nutra-Flo "foliar plant food" is completely safe for foliar application.

- made from 100% orthophosphate
- chloride-free
- 100% water soluble
- crystal clear, water-white liquid
- low-salt index
- neutral pH

Improves Soybean, Corn & Alfalfa Yields

Research shows foliar feeding boosts maturity, quality and yield. Plants get an immediate source of N-P-K when soil nutrients are unavailable. Large applications of nitrogen, high organic matter, high or low pH, dry conditions, excess moisture, extreme heat or cold can reduce macro or micronutrient availability.

CROP	BENEFITS OF FOLIAR PLANT FOOD	YIELD INCREASE
Soybeans	• Improves and increases pod set • Hastens maturity	Up to 12 bu/A
Corn	• Higher test weight • Drier corn at harvest	Up to 9 bu/A
Alfalfa	• Increased protein quality • Hastens maturity	Up to 4 ton/A

Easy to Apply with Post-Emerge Chemicals

USDA Announces New Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — USDA officials are adding another dimension to helping farmers improve water quality and provide wildlife habitat in 20 counties in southeast and central Pennsylvania, including Lancaster County, through the new Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP).

Sign-up begins June 1, 2000, and continues until the state acreage quota is met.

USDA has set a goal to provide conservation benefits on a total of 100,000 acres in the 20 county area with 25,000 of these acres established in buffers.

The Farm Service Agency will provide cost-share for installing conservation practices as well as land rental payments in return for not cropping the land. Cost-share is set at 50 percent with state efforts under way to increase that figure to 100 percent.

The Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) will provide planning, design, and installation assistance to farmers for practices such as establishing permanent grass cover, tree plantings, grass waterways, forest riparian buffers, and wetland restoration.

The Pennsylvania Game Commission has provided funding to NRCS for nine wildlife habitat specialists which will be positioned throughout the eligible counties.

"This is an excellent example of a federal and state partnership working for the health of the land and the future of a healthy ecosystem," said Janet Oertly, NRCS State Conservationist. "Our employees have a history of working one-on-one with landowners to plan options which cover all the aspects of the environment—oil, water, animals, air, and humans. CREP provides another tool to use in that planning process."

Considerations will be given to landowner and renter relationships in these 10 to 15-year contracts which will reduce erosion, improve water quality, and provide food, water, and shelter as well as travel corridors for wildlife. USDA is partnering with the Pennsylvania Department for Environmental Protection, Pennsylvania Game Commission, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Ducks Unlimited, the Chesapeake Bay foundation, and others.

"CREP is similar to the Conservation Reserve program (CRP) in land eligibility and contract lengths," said Bill Baumgartner, FSA state executive director. "It is different from CRP in that land rental payments and cost-share are much higher. This program should really benefit the land and the landowner.

CREP is a unique program sponsored jointly by USDA and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. State officials are working to increase the cost-share amount to 100 percent. CREP is now available in 12 states, including the neighboring states of Maryland, Virginia, New York, and Ohio.

Interested landowners should contact their local USDA Service Center for more information on how to participate.

Significant Knowledge Gap In Debate Over GMO

PARIS, France — Consumers around the world are taking home a negative message about genetically modified organisms (GMO). More consumers see the issue as one where the risks outweigh the benefits, according to a new poll of 5,000 adults by Angus Reid Group Worldwide.

Increasingly, it seems that consumers see the issue as one of food safety and public health rather than progress in science and technology.

Over half of consumers in Japan, France, Germany, Australia and Canada see the issue in a health and safety context. In the U.S., 44 percent see it in that context, as do 39 percent of shoppers in the United Kingdom. Only in Brazil, where awareness of the issue is the lowest, is it seen largely as a science and technology matter (61 percent).

Among the eight countries polled, the trend toward GMO foods was seen most negatively in Japan (82 percent), followed by Germany (73 percent) and France (71 percent). Americans are growing more disenchanted with the concept. Forty-five percent of Americans held a negative view when polled by the Angus Reid Group in 1998, compared to 51 percent earlier this year.

The same holds for Canadians — 59 percent hold negative views about GMO foods, up from 45 percent two years ago. In Brazil, just 45 percent of shoppers view this trend negatively.

When it came to identifying the benefits or advantages of GMO foods, the most commonly mentioned benefit is productivity-related (improved efficiencies/higher yields in food production), mentioned by 31 percent.

On the consumer end of it, 15 percent mention better quality foods and another 15 percent mention fewer pesticides. As well, one in 10 mention the potential for improved nutritional value of GMO foods.

Of particular note is that 25 percent of those surveyed expect GMO foods to provide no benefits or advantages. An additional 10 percent were unsure of any benefits that might result.

While awareness is fairly high on a global scale, more than four in 10 consumers — ranging from 44 percent to 58 percent — still say they only understand "a little" about GM foods. Understanding is greatest in Germany, Australia and the U.K.

Americans and Brazilians are least likely to say they understand the issue.

From Forest To Flooring

Agriculture. According to Lyskava, the forest production industry employs 90,000-100,000 individuals in the entire state in three different sectors.

The first sector, lumber, includes logging, sawmills, panels, floorings, log and mobile homes, and moldings. About 1,700 wood-related firms make their home in Pennsylvania and employ 36,000 employees. The second sector, furniture, includes household and furniture plus fixtures. About 17,000 workers are employed in this sector in 500 firms. The paper and paper products sector includes pulp and paper, paperboard, and container boxes. About 400 firms employ 36,000 Pennsylvanians, obviously a very important economic driving force over the entire state. Lancaster hosts the highest number of wood-related establishments in the state, with 176 establishments employing more than 5,000 residents. York, with the Spring Grove paper factory, employs more than 6,000 residents. The top hardwood producer in America, Pennsylvania companies produce 1.1 billion board feet of lumber annually.

If currrent trends in the timber industry continue, the future is bright for wood-related businesses. With increased concern and emphasis on utilization and sustainability, logging companies are assuring themseles of future supply. "Logs need to be available not only today but years down the road," explained Lyskava.

Pennsylvania forest products actually come from predominantly small, family-run companies harvesting locally-grown trees. "Their ties are not to Wall Street but to Main Street,' said Lyskava. "There's a misconception that it's a giant, corporate enterprise instead of a business harvesting locally-grown product with strong ties to the community they serve."

Tom Buzby, Weaber's director of governmental affairs, gave a summary on the Sustainable Forestry Initiative of Pennsylvania (SFI). The organization, a voluntary, effort to preserve trees, is a program of forestry and conservation practices. SFI accomplishes its goals through educating landowners, training loggers, and providing the public with information on forests.

Through the SFI program landowners receive the latest information on methods for managing forests. To promote sustainable forestry practices, loggers learn skills and proper environmental practices.

In educating the public SFI works to "assure them (the public) that we've got a great forest system managed by skilled people," said Buzby.

Bill Robie, from the Hardwood Lumber Manufacturers Association of Pennsylvania (HLMA), explained how the organization's outreach and education projects. "Project Learning Tree," for example, a national environmental education program, will be distributed to every public school in the state this summer. The program includes a poster, video, and interactive CD ROM along with other materials to help teach schoolchildren about the industry. In addition, HLMA partnered with Penn State to outfit the interior of the university's nearby airport terminal in hardwood, an opportunity to expose people to hardwood products.

The Mill

Matt Weaber, vice president of Weaber and grandson of founder Walter Weaber, led the group on a tour through the mill. The company produces 200 truckloads, or 900,000 square feet of lumber per week of predominantly oak and poplar, species common to the area. The company produces approximately 20,000 board feet per hour.

Weaber gathers the bulk of their wood from a 70-mile radius, a circle which sometimes stretches 150 miles away. This radius reaches into five other states. Since much of this area is agricultural, the company uses a highly-sensitive metal detector to locate the insulators or wire before the log goes in to be sawed.

Inside the mill, the trees are debarked and processed through a headsaw, which slices the logs into a rough, four-sided "cant" that is 8-16 feet long. The bigger pieces recirculate for a recut. The cut of the cants are dictated by computer but an operator carefully positions the logs before cutting. By keeping an eye on the computer screen and operating the various buttons and pedals, the operator sends the log into the twin bandsaw.

The cuts are sorted by species, length, and width, and graded according to value. Next the planks are dropped into bins along with cuts of similar value. The boards are run through a planer, regraded, and sent through a kiln drying process. Although drying time depends on the thickness and type of wood drying, most wood is dried for about a week to the desired six- to- eight- percent moisture content. Three million board feet are in some form of drying at all times in the six kilns and two pre-drying kilns. The boards move to the warehouse, where they are shrink-wrapped for handling efficiency and protection and stacked like vanilla wafers in cellophane along the warehouse wall.

The Trends

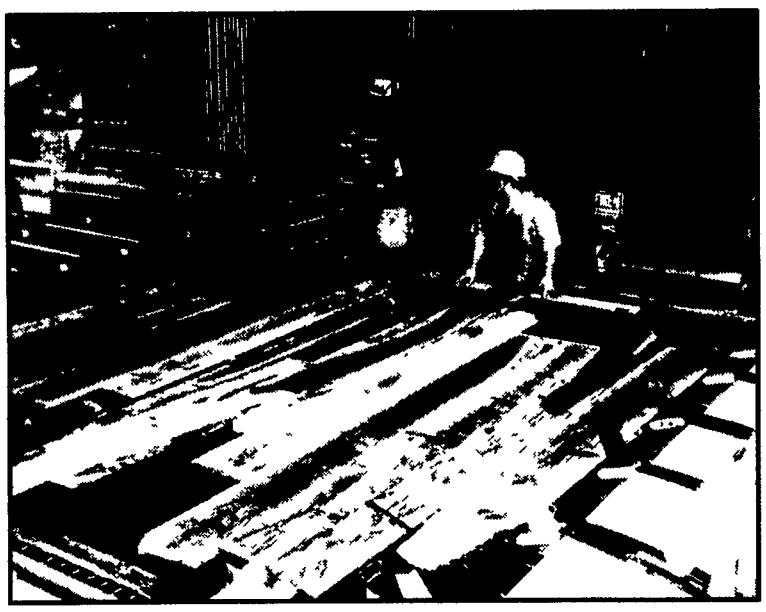
"We get 25 percent more out of a log than we did 20 years ago," said Weaber. Part of this efficiency can be attributed to "optimization," where a computer scans the logs to determine the optimum solution for most effective cutting. In addition, the company uses the thinnest blade possible to create less sawdust. The green sawdust that is produced goes to the boilers in the wood-drying kilns on the property and the dry sawdust becomes bedding for area livestock.

The six truckloads of sawdust produced every week is a number that grows smaller every year, thanks to increased efficiency. Bark, another by-product of the process, is used by area landscapers. The company's short board program utilizes the smaller pieces normally sent to the chopsaw.

To ensure a quality end product, the knots are cut out of the planks. The boards with knots that are two feet or longer move into the short board program, where they are marketed to the do-it-yourself home centers. The lower grade boards go to chopsaws while the boards 18 inches or shorter go to the "finger-jointer." To finger-joint a board, grooves are cut into of the board and the boards are puzzled-pieced together, then glued with a regular wood glue. Next the rough edges are taken off to yield a more paintable product.

"Years ago these boards would have been sawdust, but now we're recovering more wood out of the same log," said Weaber. The finger joint boards are actually stronger and more stable, as they lock each other in place, and the joints allow for greater surface area for glue," said Weaber. Also the boards are typically 40 percent cheaper than other boards of the same size. "For us, it's a value-added product, because it's got more value than sawdust," Weaber said. When the long finger-jointed boards are joined to other finger-joined boards, they become "edge-jointed," with a hardwood floor appearance. These boards are used for stair skirts or column wraps in home construction.

Bob Stamey positions the four-sided "cants" according to the computer scanning results for the operating saw. Closely watcing the computer screen, Stamey dictates the movement of the cant by operating appropriate buttons and pedals.

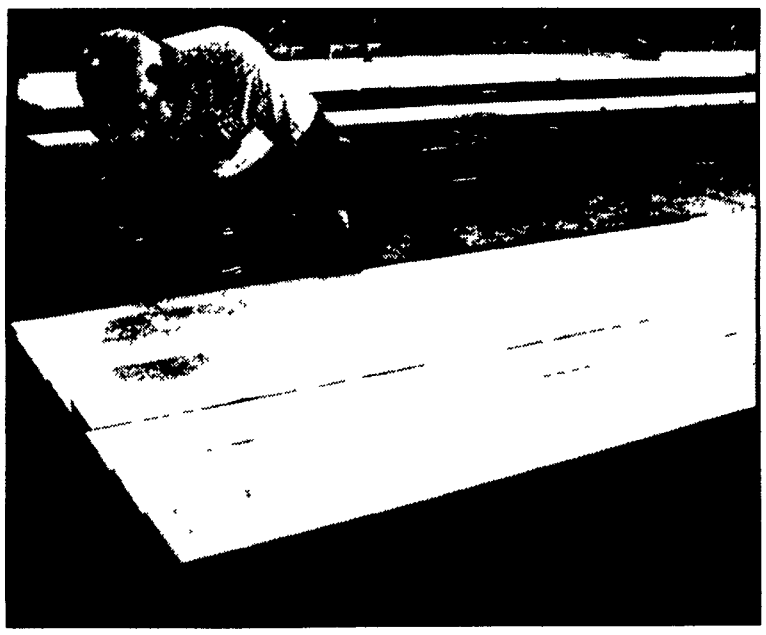


The boards are sorted by species, length, and and then graded according to value. They will be dropped into bins with cuts of similar value before they head to the planer, are regarded, and sent to the kiln to dry for about a week.

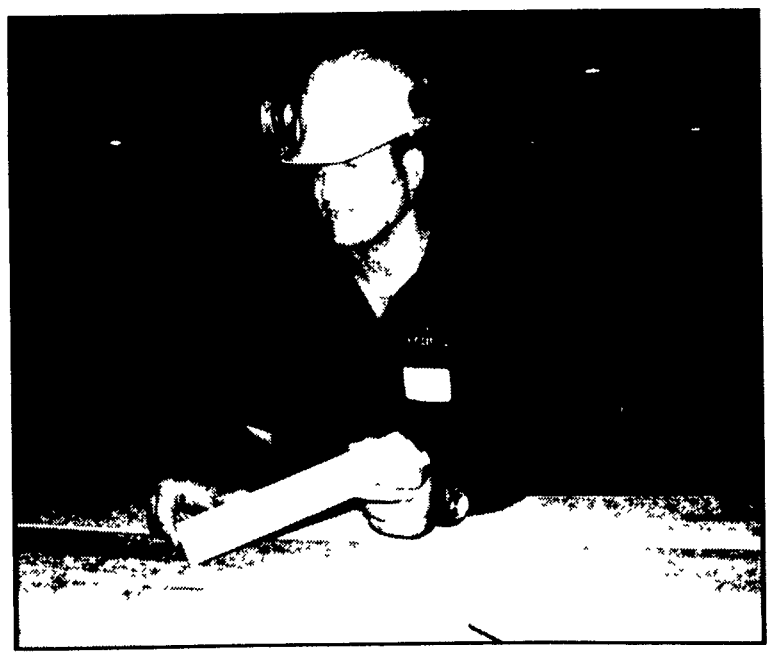
Another value-added process Weaber utilizes is the veneer profiler, which includes a piece of veneer glued on top of the jointed board underneath. This yields an oak veneer face or, more simply, a thin slice of oak over an oak substrate floor. A pelleted glue is heated and pressed to hold the veneer finish onto the wood beneath.

Small personal computers are one example of the technology which is changing the face of the timber industry. Workers use hand-held computers in the warehouse, where the computer screens show what cut of wood is needed to fill an order, then deducts the board from inventory. This, of course, has drastically cut down the time needed to fill the smaller orders the company

(Turn to Page A24)



The company's short board program includes finger- and- edge-jointed boards less than 18 inches long together. These boards are actually stronger and more stable and 40 percent cheaper than traditional boards.



Matt Weaber, vice president of Weaber Inc., shows a board which has a thin slice of oak over a finger- and edge-jointed board. A pelleted glue is heated and pressed to hold the veneer face to the board underneath.

receives, besides the larger, wholesale orders.

"You don't realize how much computers are used," said Robie. "The tools foresters have available are amazing. They can find property lines or pull up a map out on the site." He also pointed out the impact the wood scanners have had on increasing efficiency and thus competition in the industry.

"We export about four percent of our total production," said Weaber. This is a drastic change from the mid '80s, when we exported about 50 percent of our product. That was a conscious effort, especially since 1991, when we began to sell the value-added product for the 'do-it-yourself'er'. There's more than enough market to take care of our product," said Weaber of the home department outlet. "Besides, America's the number one consumer of wood products."

The Forest

From 1870-1910, colonists razed Pennsylvania's forests; prior to that the Native Americans had burned the forest. Consequently, today's forests are considered to be "even-aged," as they have all matured from the turn of the century. The species which make up Pennsylvania forests today are not necessarily the species which dotted the Pennsylvania countryside before the deforestation.

"The species we have now are not just younger versions of the forests cut down in 1800, which included softwoods and hemlocks," explained Robie. "When the earlier forests were cut down it created space for the shade-intolerant trees.

"If we let the forests go without any control we would see the shade-tolerant trees grow and take over the others. It's dynamic, it changes all the time. Timber harvesting interrupts the process of succession. We can control how a forest grows." Today's market, said Robie, utilizes what is available, and the shade-intolerant trees such as poplar and ash thrive in the cleared or thinned areas of forest.

The Harvest

To illustrate timber harvesting from a small area, the group headed to a six-acre site which Weaber Inc. had harvested this past spring.

"A landowner can make money off a four or five-acre tract," said Pat Wood, who joined the tour from William J. Green & Associates. "People don't realize that."

At the site Weaber's chief forester Dennis Brehm described the thinning process which takes place several years before the larger, more comprehensive harvest. Trees which are of less value, such as Maple, may be cut to make room for the growth of neighboring higher-value trees. Trees that are left will have more room to grow so they'll grow faster, Brehm said. Eliminating these trees also prevents them from reseeding.

A few years after thinning, foresters will select the trees to take for the harvest. Foresters judge the size and quality of the trees to determine the number of board feet which the trees will yield before giving the owner an estimate. Weaber pays the owner per tree before the crew cuts the first tree. During the selection process, foresters determine tree health by looking at the bark and noting any swells or peeling which may reveal a rotten interior.

"You want to keep some of it so when you want to cut again they'll have nice trees to sell," said Brehm of the selection and harvesting process. "You want to keep the same quality woods or improve it." Typically, Weaber takes about 10 trees per acre.

The landowner's goals help the foresters determine how many and which trees to cut. "This owner's objectives of harvesting timber, aesthetics, and wildlife are taken into consideration. If wildlife is important to the owner, and a tree has holes and doesn't have much value for our purposes, we'll leave it standing," said Brehm.

The crooked or too-slender tree-tops are chopped to get wood close to the ground. This method improves the aesthetics of the site, provides wildlife habitat, speeds the decomposition process, and protects saplings from deer. Brehm described stands of forests where clusters of regeneration took place around the protective tree-tops.

The stumps are taken to best conserve the lumber available. For instance six square board feet (one board foot is one foot square plus one inch thick) are lost for every one inch left as a stump. "The best lumber on any tree is the first off the stump, so you want your stump as close to the ground as possible," said Brehm.

Poplar and oak trees take approximately 60 years to reach their final height of 70-80 feet, with the heavier oaks weighing in at almost two tons apiece. They can, in fact, be harvested in 15 years.

"The longer they stand out there, the more goes wrong with them," Brehm said. "When they get beyond their prime, they peak out. Disease, insects, rot, and defects decrease their value, or a windstorm comes and blows the trees over."

Since the area's trees will grow in naturally, Weaber does not have to place seedlings. "As long as you want to keep the same species, you don't have to replant. Nature can put things in there better then we can plant. If we'd put a seedling in we'd have to mulch and take care of it, but not if they're reseeded naturally. As soon as you cut and open up a clearing for some sun, all the seeds that have been sitting on the ground just take off," Brehm said.

The group observed the regrowth of trees in the cleared areas. Here Brehm points out the saplings which have grown since the thinning phase that was completed three years earlier.

Besides reseeding the grass, Weaber employs other conservation methods to slow water runoff. "Water bars," a mound of earth placed across the timber road, diverts water, and slows runoff down the slope.

Briars quickly join the reseeded grass in a cut area, which helps to hold the soil in place. The seeds, which have been on the ground waiting, will now receive sunlight, germinate, take root, and eventually shade out the briars.

Varying township regulations on logging are one of the challenges which face the industry. "The irony is that the townships

Phytochemicals Keep The Doctor Away

ITHACA, N.Y. -- Time to adjust an old adage: It's the phytochemicals in the apple each day that keep the doctor away.

A combination of plant chemicals, such as flavanoids and polyphenols --collectively known as phytochemicals -- found both within the flesh of apple and particularly in the skin -- provide the fruit's anti-oxidant and anti-cancer benefits, say Cornell food scientists.

Their laboratory study, funded by the New York Apple Research Development Program and New York Apple Association, is published in the June 22 issue of the journal Nature.

Although it has long been known that apples provide anti-oxidant and health benefits, "this concept is different," says Rui Hai Liu, Cornell assistant professor of food science and lead author on the Nature article, "Anti-oxidant activity of fresh apples."

Says Liu: "Scientists are interested in isolating single compounds – such as vitamin C, vitamin E and beta carotene -- to see if they exhibit anti-oxidant or anti-cancer benefits. It turns out that none of those works alone to reduce cancer. It's the combination of flavonoids and polyphenols doing the work."

An anti-oxidant is one of many chemicals that reduce or prevent oxidation, thus preventing cell and tissue damage from free radicals in the body.

"In this research, we have shown the importance of phytochemicals to human health," says Liu's collaborator, Chang Yong Lee, Cornell professor of food science at the university's New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y. "Some of the phytochemicals are known to be anti-allergenic, some are anti-carcinogenic, anti-inflammatory, anti-viral, anti-proliferative. Now I have a reason to say an apple a day keeps the doctor away."

Marian V. Eberhardt, a graduate student in food chemistry who works in Liu's laboratory, also was part of the research team.

The researchers found that vitamin C in apples is only responsible for a small portion of the anti-oxidant activity. Instead, almost all of this activity in apples is from phytochemicals. Indeed, previous studies have shown that a 500 milligram vitamin C pill might act as a pro-oxidant. The Cornell researchers found that eating 100 grams of fresh apple with skins provided the total anti-oxidant activity equal to 1,500 milligrams of vitamin C.

"Eating fruits and vegetables is better than taking a vitamin pill," says Liu. "You can obtain enough anti-oxidants from food without worrying about toxicity. What this study shows is the combination of phytochemicals plays a very important role in anti-oxidant and anti-cancer activity, and the real health benefits may come from a phytochemical mixture."

The researchers used red delicious apples grown in New York state to provide the extracts to study the effects of phytochemicals. The researchers compared the anti-cancer and anti-oxidant activity in the apple flesh, and they also studied the fruit's skin.

Using colon cancer cells treated with apple extract, the scientists found that cell proliferation was inhibited. Colon cancer cells treated with 50 milligrams of apple extract (from the skins) were inhibited by 43 percent.

The apple flesh extract inhibited the colon cancer cells by 29 percent. The researchers also tested the apple extract against human liver cancer cells. At 50 milligrams, the extract derived from the apple with the skin on inhibited those cancer cells by 57 percent, and the apple extract derived from the fruit's fleshy part inhibited cancer cells by 40 percent.

"The consumption of whole fruits may provide the balanced anti-oxidants needed to quench reactive oxygen species," write the researchers in the Nature article. "Phytochemicals other than ascorbic acid (vitamin C) ..contribute significantly to the anti-oxidant activity of apples and to the capacity to inhibit tumor cell proliferation."

Lee began studying the enzymatic browning action of apples about 15 years ago, identifying a variety of phenolic compounds and learning how these chemicals work during the apple's browning action. Liu and Lee are working to study the antioxidant activity of various fruits and vegetables. The researchers learned that the amount of phenolic compounds in the apple flesh and in the skin varied from year to year, season to season and from growing region to growing region.

NY Farm Bureau Support Conservation District Priorities

Glenmont, New York, June 19, 2000...New York Farm Bureau, the state's largest general farm advocacy organization, is pleased with legislation that supports the Department of Agriculture and Market's Agricultural Environmental Management program and the indemnification of county Soil and Water Conservation district employees, who provide technical advice and assistance at the request of state agencies. Senate Agriculture Committee Chair, Nancy Larraine Hoffmann and Assembly Agriculture Committee Chair, William Magee have both been instrumental in their support for these efforts. Both bills await Governor George E. Pataki's approval.

"The passage of these two bills in both the Senate and the Assembly is significant for the agricultural industry and water quality for the entire state," stated John W. Lincoln, President of New York Farm Bureau. "Soil and Water Conservation employees deserve this much needed liability protection, as they help farmers and state agencies to improve and preserve our water quality."

The Agricultural Environmental Management (AEM) legislation will use a voluntary, case by case approach to water quality improvement, with an emphasis on local farmer involvement. AEM will bring technical expertise together with financial assistance to ensure that we maintain our state's water supply. Programs that are similar in concept to AEM have already been successfully implemented in areas such as the New York City Watershed, the Lake Champlain Watershed and the Skaneateles Watershed. These programs place New York State as a leader in incorporating this type of program for the betterment of agriculture and water quality.

New York Farm Bureau was pleased to work in tandem with the Soil and Water Conservation Districts as well as the Department of Agriculture and Markets on these important bills.

College Offers NewVet Tech Program

ALFRED, N.Y. — A much-anticipated new program in veterinary technology will be offered at Alfred State College beginning this fall.

The State University of New York (SUNY) and the New York State (NYS) Education Department granted approval for the program, which will prepare graduates to pass the NYS Veterinary Technician Licensing Examination.

Veterinary technology, to be taught in the Agriculture and Horticulture Department, will prepare graduates to become trained members of the veterinary health care team. Graduates, who will receive an associate in applied science degree, will be knowledgeable in each facet of the anatomy, physiology, pathophysiology, and disease of companion, domestic, laboratory, and commonly seen exotic species. The graduates will also be proficient in animal care and management procedures as well as client communications.

Veterinary technicians, described by Alfred State College as compassionate, positive, highly motivated professionals dedicated to animal health care, find employment in private practice, biological research, laboratory animal research, zoological gardens, and other related scientific areas. The "vet-tech" is a vital member of the veterinary health care team and is trusted with diverse medical responsibilities.

Students who wish to pursue the veterinary technology program must have an excellent background in the sciences, mathematics, social sciences, and communications, both oral and written.

Some of the courses included in the new two-year curriculum are laboratory animal management, anatomy and physiology of large animals, animal disease control, animal health care, anesthesia and surgical nursing, radiography, and clinical laboratory techniques.

Alfred State officials believe that enrollment for the new program will come mostly from western New York and northern Pennsylvania.

Some 247 veterinarians in western New York were surveyed regarding the need for a vet tech program. Of those polled, 133, or 54 percent, responded. Of those responding, 83 percent said there is a need for more graduate veterinary technicians and 64 percent said there is a shortage of licensed veterinary technicians in western New York.

Some 221 guidance counselors in western and central New York were also queried. Of those, 151, or 68 percent, responded. Eighty-five percent of the responders replied that students in their schools expressed an interest in veterinary technology as a career choice, and 81 percent said that they thought students from their schools would consider enrolling at Alfred State College. The guidance counselors estimated between 214 and 293 students would enroll in such a program.

"The college has shown a great commitment in getting the new vet tech program launched," said Joan Wissert, chair, Agricultural and Horticulture Department. This includes substantial renovations in the Agriculture Science Building, which now includes the anatomy laboratory, laboratory animal, and anatomy / NECROPSY wet laboratory, surgical nursing-anesthesia/ radiology complex, kennell facilities, and faculty offices.

Wissert also noted that the community has been very supportive in the college's efforts to get the vet tech program off the ground.

While enrolled in the program, students will be required to complete a 120-hour "preceptorship" (internship). The preceptorship could be started and/or completed during the summer following the first year of course work. Some 103 veterinarians have expressed initial interest in student recruitment or in the preceptorship experience.

Dr. Melvin C. Chambliss, DVM, is Alfred State's program coordinator for veterinary technology.

For more information on vet tech, contact Chambliss at (607) 587-3009, fax: (607) 587-4721, or e-mail, Chamblm@alfredtech.edu. Or you may contact the Alfred State College Admissions Office at 1-800-4-ALFRED.

Jersey Cattle Field Day

If you are interested in learning more about Jersey cattle or are looking at introducing a grazing system to your operation, plan to attend American Jersey Cattle Association Field Day. This first Jersey Field Day highlights new and innovative ideas for raising calves, speeding milking systems, and techniques to spend less money to yield more profit. The day includes:

• 9:00-10:30 a.m. — PLEASANT VALLEY JERSEYS, Chambersburg. Lester and Douglas Martin and Paul Holderman families, former Holstein dairymen, are now milking over 300 Jerseys with a management intensive grazing system. Data describing the operation's improved profitability will be available and as well as local farmers who have been pasturing for several years.

Farm location: Exit 5 off of I-81, right unto Rt. 316 to New Franklin. Right at crossroads, right on second road (Guilford Springs Rd.) to second farm on right. 717-375-4367 or ptholder@innernet.net

• 1:00-2:30 p.m. — BRYNCOED JERSEYS, Middletown. Tom Williams hosts the next stop on the tour at Bryncoed Farm, one of the earliest Jersey dairies in Pennsylvania. They now milk 150 cows in the Harrisburg suburbs with a management intensive grazing system. Williams is known for his innovative ideas and has done extensive research on robotic milkers. There should be a video on this milking system available on the farm.

Farm location from Pleasant Valley Jerseys: I-81 North to Carlisle exit to PA Turnpike East to Exit 19 (Harrisburg East exit). After toll booth take second ramp to right (Highspire). Bear right onto Eisenhower Boulevard to first traffic light. Right onto Fulling Mill Road, one mile to farm on left. 717-939-7584 or twilliam@epix.net

• 4:30-6:00 p.m. — LONG MEADOWS FARM, Hamburg. Doc and Helene Dreisbach will be the next stop which features 120 Jerseys. These cows have been the high-input marginal return route and now receive the bulk of their roughage through grazing about eight months of the year. The Dreisbachs feel that in addition to improved herd health and a lower cull rate, grazing portrays a positive image of dairying to the public.

Farm location from Pleasant Valley Jerseys: I-283 North to I-83 North to I-81 North to I-78 East. Take exit 8 (Shartlesville), bear to the right to stop sign on Old Rt. 22. Turn left (east) and go through town. Four miles east of Shartlesville, turn left on Walnut Road. At stop sign turn right. 610-562-3966 or hzd94@aol.com.

Preregistration is not required but is requested. Please contact the farms or Paula England at American Jersey Cattle Association (pengland@iwaynet.net) or call 614-861-3636. Also plan to attend the Summer Splash at Meadow View sale on Tuesday. For lunch there are restaurants in Carlisle before the PA Turnpike or after exiting the Turnpike in the Harrisburg area. Dinner will be served at Long Meadows Farm at 6:30 p.m.

Talking About Money
John Berry,
Agricultural Marketing Agent
Penn State Cooperative Extension

Money is a common problem for a family, regardless of income, age and education of family members. Sometimes a lack of income to meet basic needs causes the money hassle. But, more often, inadequate communication about money is the root of financial problems.

While family members have different values and attitudes toward spending and saving money, or when families strive for unrealistic goals, there is a potential for conflict. When family members do not "talk things out," even the best spending plan may not work.

Communication among family members is not always the easiest thing to do, but it is important if you want to get the most satisfaction from financial resources. Generally, the more open the communication about family finances, the better the quality of those decisions.

Communication Guidelines

Preventing and overcoming money problems takes honest and candid communication. It also takes time and effort. Be willing to arrange a specific time when all family members can talk about money. Meet on a regular basis instead of waiting until problems occur. Choose a location where you will not be interrupted.

Here are some suggestions for increasing the quality of communication about money matters in your family:

• Recognize that whoever earns the money does not also earn the right to dictate how it should be spent. Family members, including children old enough to understand, need to make decisions about money as a team. Allow everyone to have input in financial decisions. Family members will be more satisfied with decisions if they helped to make them.

• Clearly identify the issue at hand. Do not drag other points into the discussion that do not address the problem, concern, or dissatisfaction. Is the problem one of spending too much money, spending it at the wrong time, or spending it on something you consider unnecessary or unimportant?

• Let each family member freely state his or her wants, needs, and personal feelings. Avoid judging or criticizing others. Encourage communication beginning with "I think" or "I feel." Talk about the present. Avoid phrases such as "you always" and "you never."

• Listen carefully to the other person. Respond to statements by others with some indication that you understand. Or ask questions until you do understand.

• Be willing to compromise and negotiate for a realistic settlement of differences. In many cases, family members must compromise. Making a contract or written agreement may help avoid misunderstandings.

Meet on a regularly scheduled time, and limit to 30-40 minutes.

Values Affect Decisions

Begin communicating about money by identifying personal values. Values represent those qualities, situations, and material things an individual cherishes most.

Values are a product of your past experiences, present situation, and expectations for the future.

Some values and attitudes toward money can be traced to childhood. What were your parents' attitudes toward money, use of credit, or "keeping up with the Joneses?" Was money a constant point of conflict — or perhaps a subject that was never discussed openly?

Values guide decisions. How you use time and how you spend money reflect your values. Also, the goals you establish mirror what you have chosen as important things in life. Answering the following questions may help you identify some of your values:

• Family: Do you want to have children? If so, how many? What type of lifestyle would satisfy you most? Are you prepared for the financial responsibilities of a family?

• Work: Are you satisfied with your job? Do you make as much money as you would like? How do you feel about both the husband and wife working outside the home or farm? Are you willing to move for job advancements?

• Home: Do you want to rent or own a home? Can you afford to furnish your own home as you would like?

• Transportation: Could you get along with only one car? Would you be willing to drive less? Would you be satisfied with a smaller car?

• Recreation: What do you do for recreation? Would you be satisfied spending less money on recreation or hobbies?

• Future security: Are you comfortable buying now and paying later? How important is savings? Have you started to plan for retirement? What provisions have you made to provide for your family in case of death or disability?

Living With Change

Change, confusion, and conflict are a normal part of everyone's life. Changing employment patterns and roles for men and women, along with uncertain economic times, have caused us to rethink how we earn and how we spend.

It is easy for family members to be guided by messages heard from the world around them. Often, the result can be a loss of knowing what is really important to each individual and to families as a whole.

Anticipating and dealing with change as it affects the way money is used is a challenging aspect of financial management. Clarifying values, analyzing potential causes of money problems, and developing some skills in communication can make money management a satisfying experience for your family.

Money Problems Summary

Most families face money problems because of a lack of planning and communication. These problems generally fall under four categories.

• Value conflicts. To save or spend, to buy life insurance or a new car for college tuition or a new drill, these choices reflect values and potential conflicts. No two persons have exactly the same values, but when there are sharp differences in values in a family, negotiation is vital. Dissimilar values between spouses will either result in each establishing different goals and priorities, or none at all.

• Unrealistic goals. Striving immediately for the same quality house, furnishings, and car that took your parents 30 years to earn is a common problem. Insisting on unrealistic standards often results in frustration and, worse, overindebtedness. Setting priorities, resisting outside pressures of advertising and peers, and taking satisfaction from the "no cost" aspects of life can help.

• Emotional uses of money. Buying status, friendship, or love; controlling or punishing others by withholding money; and overspending to get back at another family member are all emotional uses of money. When hidden meanings are attached to money and they go unrecognized, trouble brews. Strive to recognize and prevent emotional use of money.

• Lack of planning. Impulse buying with credit cards, daily trips to the store, inadequate health insurance, and low-yield investments all indicate a lack of financial planning. Setting new goals and seeking alternatives are necessary for successful financial management. In times of inflation and rapid change, relying on old habits can be costly.

Guidelines For Talking About Money

Ask the following questions when talking about money with a spouse or another member of the family.

• How do you feel about the way your family communicates about money?

• Share your "ideal." How would you like your situation to be?

• Identify where you would like some help. Do you agree or disagree about needs for help?

• What are some sources of help available to you?

• Are you able to talk with another person about his/her financial mistakes (such as overspending and making a large purchase without consulting you)?

• Are you able to talk about potential money problems before they happen?

Making financial decisions is a challenge for every family. If you run into problems making decisions, these steps may help you arrive at an acceptable solution:

• Step 1. Define the problem. Be specific. List only one problem at a time.

• Step 2. List ways the problem could be solved. Write down all possible solutions that come to mind. Do not judge their worth at this point.

• Step 3. Now evaluate each of the solutions listed in Step 2. Are they workable practical and agreeable to everyone involved? Can you combine several alternatives?

• Step 4. Select one solution. Outline the steps necessary to arrive at this solution.

• Step 5. What might stand in the way of reaching your goal? How can you avoid these obstacles? What are you willing to sacrifice to solve this problem? Whose support do you need?

The "Talk About Money and Family Worksheet" is designed to give you more insight into your values and attitudes about money. It also will indicate some of what you know about your family's income and spending patterns. Ask other family members to fill out the worksheet. Do not let the other person(s) see your responses until the worksheets are completely filled out. Then compare. Talk about points of agreement and disagreement. Can you see any differences in values and attitudes that may be causing conflict in your family? Can you pinpoint potential problems? Use the above information to help with your discussion.

Talking About Money And Family Worksheet

When you're talking about money with your spouse or another family member, consider these questions as starting points:

• What do you think about the way your family communicates about money?

• Share your "ideal." How would you like your situation to be?

• Identify where you would like some help. Do you agree or disagree about needs for help?

• What are some sources of help available to you?

• Are you able to talk with another person about his/her financial mistakes (such as overspending or making a large purchase without you)?

• Are you able to talk about potential money problems before they happen?

• Use the following "Talk About Money Worksheet" to give you more insight into your values and attitudes about money. Use it to find out what you know about your family's income and spending patterns.

Doyle Begins AGA Work

WESTMINSTER, Colo. — S. Patrick Doyle will begin work with the American Gelbvieh Association on July 10 as its new director of education and research.

Doyle replaces Bob Weaber, who is leaving AGA after five years to pursue a doctorate at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

Doyle earned a bachelor's degree in animal science-industry option from Texas A&M University. He has also completed a master's and doctorate in animal breeding and genetics at Colorado State University.

During his graduate work at Colorado State University, Doyle was the coordinator for the John E. Rouse Colorado State University Beef Improvement Center near Saratoga, Wyo. He coordinated data management and collection, within-herd genetic prediction, and presented performance data for both the cowherd and the Center's bull performance test. Doyle also assisted with selection and mating decisions for the Center's cowherd.

His research projects revolved around the potential impacts of sexed semen adoption in commercial beef production and genetic parameter estimation for reproduction traits such as heifer pregnancy and gestation length.

As director of education and research, Doyle will coordinate the AGA's National Cattle Evaluation, work with additional research for Gelbvieh, and be a genetic resource person for Gelbvieh members. He will also be the AGJA staff adviser and work with Gelbvieh junior members.

"The AGA is fortunate to find a person as technically competent as Patrick, that also has real-world practical application of the newest technologies," said AGA Executive Director Don Schiefelbein. "We are sorry to lose Bob Weaber, but wish him all the best in his new endeavor. Patrick will be an excellent addition to the current AGA staff and we look forward to him getting started."

helped to shield the rest of the industry from this disease."

This virus infects many stone fruit species including peaches, apricots, plums, and almonds. Fruit from infected trees may be deformed or blemished with spots or rings. The virus also can cause fruit to drop prematurely from the tree. Currently, the only way to stop the spread of the virus is to destroy infected and exposed trees. Plum Pox was discovered in Adams County, in the fall of 1999. Prior to the discovery in Pennsylvania, plum pox had not been detected in the United States.

USDA is mounting an intensive survey and eradication program in and around the infected area. Earlier this year, USDA provided $3.6 million for local, regional and national surveys and research, which to date has shown that the disease has not spread to other regions. Following the issuance of rules by USDA, the federal funding announced this week, will be available to growers in various size payments depending on the total acres of infected trees that are discovered in each grower's

Year 2000 Maryland Farm Bureau Queen To Be Named At The 119th Maryland State Fair

Twenty-three young women between the ages of 16-19 who have earned their place in the Year 2000 Maryland Farm Bureau Queen Contest by winning their county Farm Bureau-sponsored contests will compete for the Maryland Farm Bureau Queen title, scholarship, and cash awards valued up to $6,500.

The reigning Maryland Farm Queen, Evelyn Hardman of Allegany County, will have the honor of passing her title on to her successor, the Year 2000 Maryland Farm Bureau Queen, at the Maryland Farm Bureau Queen Contest, Friday, Aug. 25 at 7 p.m. in the Horse Sales Pavilion.

"It has been a wonderful and educational experience to travel throughout the State of Maryland to represent our State's number one industry — agriculture," said 1999 Maryland State Farm Queen Evelyn Hardman. "I hope many people will join me as I pass on my title to the first Maryland Farm Bureau Queen of the Millennium."

The 23 Maryland County Farm Bureau Queens will be critiqued, during a two-day competition, primarily on their agricultural knowledge and experience, civic involvement, appearance, poise and communication skills.

The 2000 Maryland Farm Bureau Queen will be present throughout the run of the State Fair to award prizes, and mingle with fairgoers, dignitaries, and media representatives. Her responsibilities will continue throughout the year, as she will participate in a number of activities representing Maryland agriculture. The runners-up will assist the Maryland Farm Bureau Queen with award presentations and serve as hostess for dignitaries.

The 119th Maryland State Fair, which will offer a variety of livestock and horse shows, midway rides, thoroughbred horse racing, arts and crafts and home arts' exhibits, runs from Friday, Aug. 25 through Monday, Sept. 4 at the Timonium Fairgrounds in Baltimore County.

Somerset County Conducts Beef Jackpot Show

Dan Miller had the club calf champion steer and was named Somerset County exhibitor at the Beef Jackpot Show June 25.

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — Kelly Dietrich was thrilled at the Somerset County Beef Jackpot Show recently, when her steer was named supreme champion.

The 17-year-old from Hamburg, said she sensed victory at the county fairgrounds as champion-type qualities became more visible with the steer's growth.

"I am going to go with the steer with the most promise," said judge Kerry Lawrence from Hebron, Ohio, just prior to announcing which animal would be supreme.

"He looked awesome," Dietrich said of the winner. "I thought he looked cool. He was bigger today," she said about the first time grand champion who, earlier at the TriState Jackpot Show, was named the show's reserve champion.

The steer was sired by Hostage and the dam was half-Maine out of Bo Jackson. Andy McIntire, Berryville, Va., was the breeder.

Dietrich will attend the Berks campus of Penn State to major in ag-business in the fall, she said. Jim and Donna Dietrich, her parents, keep about 50 head of beef and raise about 1,000 acres of crops, according to the daughter. Her sister Kristy is 15.

From Woodbine, Md., Matt Fogle showed the reserve champion selected out of the 76 steers in the show. It was a crossbred animal, which also won its division for the 16-year-old.

Uncle Sam Salutes Marines With Milk And Ice Cream

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — It is not often that "Uncle Sam" calls a meeting between dairy farmers and the U.S. Marines over a bowl of ice cream or a glass of milk. During National June Dairy Month, however, anything is possible — especially when the Uncle Sam in question is, well, a cow.

On June 15, the recruits who graduate to U.S. Marine status at the Recruit Depot in Parris Island, SC, received a rather rare, if not MOOOving, salute. For the first time, they were welcomed into the Marine ranks with a milk and ice cream toast, complements of Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) of Kansas City, Missouri and one of its joint venture partners, Suiza Foods of Dallas, Texas.

The one-day event came about because of one very patriotic, red-white-and blue "Uncle Sam." On loan from DFA, "Uncle Sam" is one of the art cows from last year's Chicago Cows on Parade exhibit being showcased in 20 locations around the City of Beaufort, SC as a special "Cows on Vacation" exhibit.

"We're glad to host the DFA leadership and to show them how the young people from farms across America arrive here to take up the challenge of being a Marine," said Major Bryan Salas, public affairs, U.S. Marines, Parris Island. "The DFA social for the new Marines demonstrated the patriotism of the dairymen cross America."

After graduation ceremonies, recruits and their guests enjoyed icy cold white and chocolate milk and ice cream novelties provided by the Suiza Fluid Dairy Group. Photos were taken with DFA's Uncle Sam Cow, which has earned more than $100,000 for hunger relief over the past year.

This is a three star event. We're proud to celebrate the graduations, "Cows on Vacation," and June Dairy Month with the U.S. Marines and the City of Beaufort," said Agnes Schafer, executive director of public relations, DFA. "Parris Island isn't a typical spot for a cow to pasture, but it's the right place for our Uncle Sam. She is very patriotic. While we're here, we might even be able to recruit a few Marine milk mustaches to salute the day."

Dairy Farmers Salute Crucible Graduates With Ice Cream And Milk During JDM

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Riddle. How many ice cream bars and milk pints does it take to celebrate a recruit's completion of the Crucible — that final three-day test that makes a recruit into a U.S. Marine?

According to Lew McCravy, division sales manager for Flav-O-Rich/Suiza Fluid Dairy Group of Florence, SC, the answer is 4,000 ice cream novelties and 2,500 pints of white and chocolate milk.

McCravy and his Flav-O-Rich team joined the dairy producer leaders of Dairy Farmers of America (DFA), the U.S. largest dairy cooperative based in Kansas City, MO., in bringing the Real thing (milk and ice cream) to cool down graduating troops during a recent June Dairy Month event at the U.S. Marine Recruit Depot in Parris Island, SC. The event coincided with the fact that the U.S. Marines are hosting DFA's Uncle Sam Cow on their base as a part of the "Cows on Vacation" art exhibit being sponsored by the City of Beaufort, SC.

"It was an honor to team up with DFA and the U.S. Marine Corp. in officially saluting the fine young women and men who we saw make it through the Crucible," said McCravy. "I can't think of a better way to use DFA's Uncle Sam cow, ice cream and milk in celebrating June Dairy Month. We enjoyed meeting the Marines and their families and being part of their lives during such a special event."

To celebrate June Dairy Month, recruits and their guests enjoyed icy cold white and chocolate milk and ice cream novelties following recent Crucible and graduation ceremonies. The products were provided by the Suiza Fluid Dairy Group, based in Dallas, TX.

To mark the occasion, Herman Brubaker, DFA chairman and a dairy producer from West Alexandria, OH, presented Brigadier General Stephen A. Cheney, the depot's commanding officer, with a commemorative Uncle Sam cow tee shirt. "We may be in different occupations, but U.S. dairy farmers and U.S. Marines share some of the same core values — hard work and a lifetime of commitment," said Brubaker.

DFA dairy farmers Jim Waldrop of Newberry, SC and Tom Camerlo of Florence, CO joined the DFA and Flav-O-Rich team in witnessing 300 recruits cross the finish line after three days of grueling field work with very little sleep or food.

"This is something you don't do every day, that's for sure. We may have dished up the dairy products, but the U.S. Marines provided us with a scoopful of patriotism and courage and a real fine appetite for dairy products," said Waldrop, whose typical day finds him managing the family dairy partnership that includes 400- cows and 1,100-acres.

Camerlo, who operates a 500-cow dairy in Colorado and is chairman of the National Milk Producers Federation, agreed that the promotion was inspirational. "As farmers, we're proud that, in some small way, our Uncle Sam cow and the ice cream and milk added a lighthearted touch to an incredible show of dedication and endurance. If they weren't U.S. Marines, these folks would make fine dairy farmers, but we'll settle for the fact that they love ice cream and milk," said Camerlo.

A Look at Soil Quality

Soil quality is a key component in achieving optimum yields in your fields. Paying attention to your soil's needs will boost your crop yields and crop quality during weather extremes such as drought or wetness. Good soil quality can also aid in growing a more vigorous plant that better resists disease and insect pressure. Healthy soil is abundant with living organisms and other key qualities, which pays to learn how the soil can work for you.

With the importance of soil quality in mind, The Lancaster Chamber, Lancaster Conservation District and Pennsylvania Association of Sustainable Agriculture have partnered with Steve Groff, owner of Cedar Meadow Farm to offer the free 7th Annual Farm Field Day. To get a first hand look at the latest, most innovative farming techniques that are proven to conserve soil while increasing productivity and sustainability, Cedar Meadow Farm in Holtwood, Lancaster County, is the place to be on July 26 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

A good first step to take in improving soil quality is to analyze the soil in your own fields through a soil test and determine any weaknesses. Mike Hubbs from the Natural Resources Conservation Service Soil Quality Institute in Auburn, AL will be demonstrating firsthand a "Soil Quality Kit" at the Field Day. This will give farmers the edge they need to identify weaknesses in their soil and gain advice to remedy any soil quality problems.

A popular exhibit at the Field Day is the 4-foot deep soil pit, which is coordinated by Dr. Ray Weil, University of Maryland. Dr. Weil will explain the soil structure and how you can improve it in your own fields. You will be able to see earthworm tunnels that go deep into the soil to observe the way plant roots travel to get nutrients. This exhibit is an excellent aid in visualizing what your soil structure really looks like.

Erosion control is a major focus of the Field Day The use of cover crops helps to control erosion as well as improve soil tilth, increase organic matter levels, enhance water infiltration and lessen pest problems. During the Field Day you will have the opportunity to see Groff's "permanent cover cropping system" and hear about how you can incorporate a similar system on your own farm. Dr. Andrew Sharply will be operating the USDA/ARS National Phosphorous Study Rainfall Simulator to observe soil erosion potential and test if phosphorous is leaving the fields during rain simulations.

Soil compaction can be a key detriment to soil quality. The uses of crop rotations, cover crops and deep tillage are all methods that can be used to reduce the effects of compaction. During the Field Day, there will be several demonstrations of deep tillage equipment on some very compacted areas in fields. Backhoe excavations will take place immediately following to allow you to see firsthand the results of the various deep tillage implements.

The Farm Field Day will highlight the latest farming practices, technology and equipment needed to help farmers positively impact their bottom line while respecting the environment. After attending this event, you will be able to formulate some ideas to use in your own operation to improve your soil quality. The free 7th Annual Farm Field Day will take place on July 26 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Cedar Meadow Farm, Holtwood, Lancaster County.

Please send your questions or comments about the Farm Field Day to Brent Landis at The Lancaster Chamber at blandis@lcci.com or 717-397-3531. For information or directions to the event, visit www.cedarmeadowfarm.com.

No-Till Corn Did Well In Drought

cover retained the moisture and improved the overall crop.

Not all ground, Hess noted, is no-tilled. Some owned ground is a clay-loam, which has to be plowed to guarantee consistency in the stand and to allow the soil to warm up.

Hess noted that when he saw the 138-bushel per acre average, "I was shocked," he said. "I did not expect that."

Hess set his sights, he noted, on 80 bushels per acre. Even that looked promising at times.

But with several 100- degree days and lack of rainfall last summer, at times the corn "never looked stressed real bad," he said.

Sometimes the corn became "pointy," he said. But timely showers at two- or three-tenths of an inch literally held drought damage at bay.

This year, some cold, wet ground proved difficult to no-till. Though the entire farm is no-till, Hess still questions the practice on the heavy clay/loam soil.

Yet this year the corn is doing well.

But Hess noted that he is moving quickly to no-till based farming.

"I started farming 11 years ago," said Hess, at the family farm a short distance away. His parents, Andrew and Dorothy, farm 103 acres.

In October last year, Bob decided to feed steers for his cousin Dwight Hess, Marietta. The steers are brought in at 600 pounds each and fed to they reach about 800-900 pounds each.

Hess keeps about 150- 170 head of feeder cattle in the barn. Cattle are shipped out when they reach the proper weights.

Hess is concerned about possible nutrient management law changes that may take into consideration phosphorous limits on farms. And with the development in Lancaster County, in addition to heavy traffic, he's had to restrict manure hauling and other work to the nighttime.

This year's no-till corn, like last year, is showing great promise at the Bob and Sharon Hess farm.

Hess farms with wife Sharon, who has her own floral business (Sharon's Floral Design), and sons Travis, 7; Philip, 4; and Ethan, 3.

The Hess's belong to East Petersburg Mennonite Church. Bob is a Junior Boys Activities leader at the church.

Travis is in the second grade at Kraybill's Mennonite School.

Question: Every now and again, I receive a call from a dairy producer who is upset that his DHIA butterfat test and his payment test are not the same. This morning such a call came in and I would like to show a piece of research that might help answer this question.

Butterfat test can vary greatly from day to day in individual cows. To illustrate this I include this chart from North Carolina State University.

We see wide variation in a five-day period as noted by cow #266 that tested a range of 1.7 to 5.95% butterfat. The average cow in this study actually varied fat test across the five-day period by 1.74% and one cow tested 3.8% differently from one milking to the other

Many factors can influence the day-to-day variation in fat test. The day and time of sampling as seen above can certainly play a role. Environmental stresses such as heat and humidity can also alter fat test very quickly. Disease pressure has an impact on fat test and usually is coupled along with large changes in milk volume. Excitement associated with activities outside the normal day-to-day life of the cows can influence fat test. Foot trimming, rectal palpations, or simple changing groups or pastures might cause large fat variation. Nutritional changes can affect fat test and should be done as gradual as possible. Allow yourself to wonder a bit about the large change in a cow when she pastures at night and then is fed a TMR during the day.

Milking equipment, like any other, will wear as time goes by. When DHIA milk meters are added temporarily to the system, vacuum levels often become inadequate thus compromising both the ability to properly milk the cow as well as the functionality of the meter itself.

As you can see, there are many opportunities for milk fat test variation. These should point out the impracticality of comparing test results from DHIA and the processing plant. Often times we are not comparing the same milk. DHIA usually measures one milking or one day and then is only part of a multiple milking pickup. Dean Amick (Director of Field Services) will suggest this when tank and DHIA butterfat test are severely different. Pull one tank sample after proper agitation and then divide into three equal portions while keeping the milk stirred. Send one to your dairy processor, one to the DHIA lab, and the other to an independent lab. This should answer some questions about testing procedures, herd management, or sampling technique used by the hauler. Remember as you proceed, the high test is not always the correct one.

Variable Rate Manure Spreader Demo At Penn State Field Diagnostic Clinic

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — A variable rate spreader to be used for biosolid applications to fields will be a highlight of the 2000 Penn State Agronomic Field Diagnostic Clinic.

The clinic will be conducted Tuesday and Wednesday, July 18 and 19, here at the Penn State Agronomy Research Farm at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center.

According to Dwight Lingenfelter, assistant extension agronomist, the Penn State-sponsored field diagnostic clinic allows certified crop advisers, consultants, county agents, and agri-industry representatives the chance to see the latest technologies to control field pests.

About 235 attended both days of the clinic last year, Lingenfelter noted. Some came from eastern Ohio and other surrounding areas.

One area to be explored is the effectiveness of herbicides in this, a wet year for Pennsylvania. In one week, a major storm at the research farm dropped about an inch of rain in a half hour, Lingenfelter said.

Pesticide and certified crop adviser (CCA) credits will be offered on six different topics.

This year's clinic, as in the past, will focus on various topics related to crop and soil management. There will be time for discussion and hands-on participation.

The program includes:

• Soil compaction — the hard facts. The field lab will use various methods to detect soil compaction. Crop growth and root penetration will be compared in compacted and uncompacted soils. Various techniques to measure soil compaction will be shown, including bulk density, the cone index, soil structure characterization, and aggregate stability. Participants will have the opportunity to practice methods to count earthworm numbers and measure infiltration. CCA credit equivalent units (CEUs): 1.0 soil and water (SW). Instructors are Dr. Sjoerd Duiker, Joel Myers, and Dr. Doug Beegle.

• Chemical spray drift prevention — new nozzle technologies. Precision application demands calibrated sprayers and the proper spray nozzles for reducing chemical spray drift. Learn the newest approaches for spraying in windy conditions and still get the job done without spraying off-target. The latest nozzles and the Penn State- rate training sprayer will be used in this demonstration. CCA CEUs; 0.5 pest management (PM) and 0.5 crop protection (CP). Instructor is Dr. Dave Wagner.

• Biosolids and nutrient management. Biosolids from municipal wastewater treatment can be a source of free nitrogen, phosphorous, and organic matter for farms (even hauled, spread, and incorporated at no cost to farmers). Biosolids must be properly managed to obtain the desired benefits and avoid possible problems. This field session will look at agronomic use of biosolids. The focus will be on nutrient management, including a look at the nutrient content, calculating available nitrogen, timing, phosphorous management, regulations, and other issues. CCA CEUs: 1 nutrient management (NM). Instructor is Dr. Rick Stehouwer.

• Variable rate manure spreader demo is scheduled at 4:15 p.m. Liquid injection-/spreading will be demonstrated using a newly developed and computer controlled variable rate liquid manure spreader with GPS capabilities. CCA CEU: 0.5 NM.

• Making an alfalfa integrated pest management (IPM) program work. This session will address basic biology of key alfalfa pests and their management. Participants will be asked to scout fields and make management decisions. CCA CEUs: 1 PM. Instructor is Dr. Dennis Calvin.

• Effects of stress factors on corn growth and development. This diagnostic session will review some basic aspects of the anatomy of the corn plant and how plant parts are affected by various early season stress factors. The objective of this session is to show how to illustrate these effects to corn producers. Participants will be encouraged to dissect plants, measure plant parts, and share results with participants. CCA CEUs: 1 CP. Instructor is Dr. Greg Roth.

• Weed science potpourri. New and commonly used herbicides will be compared side by side in this demonstration. The effect of different rates of certain herbicides on weed control will also be discussed. Also, test your weed ID knowledge and discuss control methods for problem species. CCA CEUs: 1 PM. Instructor is Dr. Bill Curran.

A registration fee of $40 per person includes lunch, refreshments, and support materials.

Register with the form by mail or fax to (814) 863-7043. Or contact Lisa Crytser in the Department of Agronomy at (814) 865-2543. Registration deadline is July 7.

Pa. Food Safety Conference Lays Groundwork For Alliance

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — With food safety continuing to be an important public health issue, a coalition of food-related organizations is laying the groundwork for the Pennsylvania Food Safety and Quality Alliance, a statewide council dedicated to promoting and improving food safety.

Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Samuel Hayes joined about 30 food safety advocates from agriculture, government, industry, and education at a recent conference at Penn State to assess and prioritize the state's food safety issues, and to form a standing advisory committee to address them.

"The alliance participants realize that food safety must be their top priority," said Penn State food safety specialist Dana McElroy, who coordinated the two-day event.

"By working cooperatively, members from all sectors of the food system — including production, processing, food service, retail and consumer — can develop more effective and consistent food safety programs."

Candace Jacobs, assistant director of the Washington State Department of Agriculture, discussed how that state formed its Food Safety Enhancement Advisory Committee, which may serve as a prototype for the Pennsylvania initiative.

Linda Frelka, vice president of quality assurance for Odwalla Inc., spoke on her company's efforts to implement stringent food safety and quality programs in the aftermath of deaths resulting from contaminated Odwalla apple juice in 1996.

Computer-assisted strategy sessions helped participants identify Pennsylvania's immediate food safety issues and discuss the potential structure and function of a food safety advisory committee to address them. McElroy said the strategy sessions yielded valuable information that will be distilled into policies and practices.

"The group identified several priority areas for improvement, including increased education and training, regulatory uniformity, and increased communication and coordination between sectors," she said. "By August, an advisory committee, comprised of representatives of government, industry, and academe will be established to prioritize and implement strategies to deal with the identified issues."

In support of a team approach to food safety, Hayes cites the Pennsylvania Egg Quality Assurance Program (PEQAP) as an outstanding example of a cooperative effort that has resulted in increased value for producers and processors.

"We're very pleased that we have what's probably the nation's leading egg quality assurance program," Hayes said. "Now, we want to use a similar approach with other vulnerable commodities. For instance, we're embarking on a dairy quality assurance program where we will apply the PEQAP principles. We want to continue supplying the best possible food for our citizens."

Food, Land, People Training

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — A Food, Land, and People Training for primary educators in Franklin and Fulton counties will be offered July 19 here at the Franklin County extension office.

Certified facilitators Jennifer Reed, district manager, Fulton County Conservation District, and Donna Hays, environmental education coordinator, Franklin County Conservation District, will conduct this workshop sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Education.

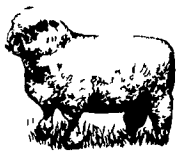
This training session will be for primary educators only (K-4 grades). Other sessions for middle and secondary educators will be scheduled later. This training is limited for 20 teachers on a first-come, first-serve basis.

A registration fee of $25 must be sent to the Franklin County Conservation District, 218 North Second Street, Chambersburg, PA 17201, on or before July 10.

The training session begins at 8 a.m. with registration and end by 5 p.m. Casual dress is suggested.

The Food, Land, and People Training qualifies for the continuing education credit under Act 48 Relating to Professional Education, Section 1205.2 — Program of Continuing Profession Education. A total of eight hours will be credited for successful completion of this daylong training.

Any questions or a copy of the registration form should be referred to Donna Hays, (717) 264-8074, ext. 5 or Jennifer Reed, (717) 485-3547.



Hardwood Forest Facts

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

- Forests cover nearly 60 percent or 17 million acres of Pennsylvania as the predominant land cover. Farmland covers about 24 percent with developed land at about 15 percent.
- Nearly 80 percent of the forest in the state is owned by an estimated 512,000 private, non-industrial owners, who own an average of 23 acres each or a total of nearly 12 million acres. About 75 percent of the raw materials used in Pennsylvania wood manufacturing come from these landowners.
- The average American uses enough wood products equal to a 100-foot tree each year.
- About 75 percent of the wood used is softwood, such as pine, which is used for home construction or furniture.
- Pennsylvania produces nearly $5 billion worth of wood products each year.
- Pennsylvania processes enough board feet (one foot by one foot by one inch) to circle the globe more than seven times.
- There's trees in your cheese - some parmesan cheese uses cellulose, found in trees, to keep it from getting lumpy.
- The state has the largest wood-related work force in the nation - about 100,000 workers in 700 job categories or about 10 percent of the state's manufacturing jobs.
- Pennsylvania ranks first in the nation for hardwood growing stock and in export grade hardwood. Cherry wood from the northwest part of the state is world-renowned.

regulate so much that they take options away for commercial forestry, so the landowners have to sell for development," said Tom Buzby.

"It's OK to pave it but not to thin it out," noted Robie.

NY Farm Bureau Support Conservation District Priorities

GLENMONT, N.Y. - New York Farm Bureau, the state's largest general farm advocacy organization, is pleased with legislation that supports the Department of Agriculture and Market's Agricultural Environmental Management program and the indemnification of county Soil and Water Conservation district employees, who provide technical advice and assistance at the request of state agencies. Senate Agriculture Committee Chair, Nancy Larraine Hoffmann and Assembly Agriculture Committee Chair, William Magee have both been instrumental in their support for these efforts. Both bills await Governor George E. Pataki's approval.

"The passage of these two bills in both the Senate and the Assembly is significant for the agricultural industry and water quality for the entire state," stated John W. Lincoln, President of New York Farm Bureau. "Soil and Water Conservation employees deserve this much needed liability protection, as they help farmers and state agencies to improve and preserve our water quality."

The Agricultural Environmental Management (AEM) legislation will use a voluntary, case by case approach to water quality improvement, with an emphasis on local farmer involvement. AEM will bring technical expertise together with financial assistance to ensure that we maintain our state's water supply. Programs that are similar in concept to AEM have already been successfully implemented in areas such as the New York City Watershed, the Lake Champlain Watershed and the Skaneateles Watershed. These programs place New York State as a leader in incorporating this type of program for the betterment of agriculture and water quality.

"This bill was a priority for all districts in the state," stated Anita Cartin, Executive Vice President of the New York Association of Soil Districts. "This is historic legislation that acknowledges the role of Soil and Water Conservation Districts as the local delivery system of State agencies. We appreciate New York Farm Bureau's role and support on this issue."

New York Farm Bureau was pleased to work in tandem with the Soil and Water Conservation Districts as well as the Department of Agriculture and Markets on these important bills. Farmers depend a great deal on the services the Soil and Water Conservation districts and the Department of Agriculture and Markets offer. These bills create a more workable relationship between farmers and the districts, while ensuring that water quality issues will continue to be addressed.

Celebrate Independence Day With a Traditional, All-American Picnic

Independence Day is a time for families, fireworks, parades and picnics—a combination that has been the all-American way to celebrate the Fourth of July since the early 1800s.

Whether you're planning to celebrate the first Independence Day of the new millennium in your own backyard or at the local park, American favorites such as lean pork, cherries and vanilla wafers are the perfect choices for an easy, festive picnic menu.

From a loin roast to a hearty slab of ribs, versatile pork is a natural for an outdoor Independence Day feast. The mild flavor of pork marries well with the sharp, smoky flavors imparted by grilling. For optimal, fork-tender pork, grill large cuts like loin roasts to medium-doneness or an internal temperature of 160 degrees F over indirect heat. Ribs should be slow-cooked over indirect heat until the meat is tender, about 1 1/2–2 hours—enough time to relax with friends and family while "tending" the grill.

Sweet cherries—at the height of their season in July—are another perfect choice for any picnic menu. Not only do sweet cherries pair well with grilled meats, they are a colorful and delicious addition to desserts and refreshing summer drinks.

Finish your picnic meal with an all-American favorite—vanilla pudding with vanilla wafers. Vanilla wafers offer a light, crispy texture and delicate flavor that make them a natural in many recipes, especially when paired with fruits. They are also perfect for today's lighter eating. Paired with a yogurt dip, vanilla wafers are a great, light-tasting snack to enjoy while waiting for the grill to heat up and the festivities to begin.

A Touch of Elegance

Picnics can be fun in the park with the whole family, but they can also be more refined parties for a select few. Try these tips to help bring a touch of elegance to your next picnic:

★Choose a quiet, shaded location away from the masses and main park thruways.

★Use a linen tablecloth and napkins. Spread a sturdy, waterproof ground cloth first and then top with a pretty tablecloth.

★Serve on real china instead of paper products. Use linen napkins placed between plates to keep dishes safe in transit.

★Bring a portable CD or tape player and play classical music or smooth jazz.

Consuming Thoughts

by

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.

According to legend, cheese was "discovered" several thousand years B.C. by an Arabian traveler who, before starting on a journey, poured milk into a pouch made of a sheep's stomach. Later, after making camp for the evening, the traveler opened the pouch to discover that the combined action of the sun's heat and enzymes in the sheep skin lining caused the milk to separate into a thickened mass (curd) and a thin, watery fluid (whey). On this journey , the traveler had inadvertently discovered a simple method for making cheese.

Today, the cheesemaking process begins as it first did with the separation of milk into curds and whey. Curd information is facilitated by acid produced by coagulating enzymes and by select microorganisms.

"Natural" is a term used to distinguish natural cheese from process cheese, which is made by grinding and heating blends of natural cheese with the aid of an emulsifier.

Natural cheese is made primarily from cow's milk, although there are varieties made from the milk of other animals (sheep, goats, buffaloes, reindeer and camels). A few unique cheeses are made from whey, the nutritious liquid by-product of cheesemaking.

Just as there are great nations of the world, there are great families or related groups of natural cheese. Listed below are the nine major cheese families and the most popular varieties associated with each.

Cheese Families

Cheddar: Cheddar, Colby, Monterey Jack; Dutch: Edam, Gouda; Parmesan: Parmesan, Romano, Sapsago; Blue-Veined: Blue, Gorgonzola, Roquefort, Stilton; Whey: Primost, Gjetost, Ricotta; Italian: Provolone, Mozzarella, Scamorze; Swiss: Swiss, Gruyere; Fresh Uncured: Cream Cheese, Neufchatel, Cottage Cheese; Surface-Ripened: Camembert, Brie, Brick, Muenster.

Cooking with cheese: Cheese, like all protein foods, is adversely affected by high heat or prolonged cooking. Although process cheese is less susceptible to heat than natural cheese, it is still advisable to follow these two basic rules of cheese cookery:

1. Use low to medium heat.
2. Do not overcook; heat just until cheese melts.

For best results, follow these tips when cooking with cheese:

- When adding cheese to hot foods, shred natural cheese; cube or slice process cheese.
- When broiling, place pan so that cheese is several inches below the heat source. Broil just until cheese melts.
- When making a sauce, add shredded cheese at the end of cooking time and heat just until melted.
- When topping a casserole, place cheese on top for the last few minutes of baking.
- When using cheese in baked dishes, bake at low to moderate oven temperatures: 325°F to 375°F or 165° to 190°C.

Storing & Freezing Cheese — The ideal way to store cheese is in the refrigerator. However, if you discover you have an abundance of cheese and do not anticipate being able to use it close to the "Best When Purchased By" date stamped on the package, the cheese may be frozen.

Most cheese, when in its original, unopened package, may be frozen for eight weeks and still be of acceptable quality provided if it is tightly wrapped and sealed in moisture-vaporproof wrap designed for freezing. Remember to label and date the package before placing the cheese in the freezer.

If the cheese has been cut into small cubes, keep it frozen for no longer than three weeks. Thaw cheese, unopened, in the refrigerator.

Which Calcium Supplement Is The Best?

MARY ALICE GETTINGS
M.S., R.D., C.D.E.
Nutrition/Health Agent

For years, research suggested that calcium in the form of calcium carbonate was the best calcium supplement absorbed by your body. New research is now pointing to calcium citrate as the more absorbable form.

While registered dietitians and other health professionals would prefer that people obtain their calcium from food sources like lower-fat dairy products, salmon, and tofu, this doesn't always happen. For years, people purchased plain old calcium supplements, only to find out they may not have been absorbed too well. Now, we are bombarded with various calcium supplements as well as chocolate and caramel chews (Viactive™) that have additional nutrients, like phosphorous, magnesium, and Vitamins D and K, to help absorb the calcium.

Most recent research looks at the difference in our body's ability to absorb calcium carbonate as compared to calcium citrate. Three studies conducted at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas found that calcium citrate was a better choice over calcium carbonate. While one study found that calcium citrate is absorbed by the small intestine two and half times better than calcium carbonate, another revealed that taking 800 milligrams of calcium citrate per day prevented bone loss in women's spines and the tops of their thigh bones as compared to women taking a placebo (or a fake calcium citrate supplement).

To determine if your calcium supplement is being absorbed by your body, place your supplement in six ounces of vinegar at room temperature and stir often for the next 30 minutes. A good supplement should break up with three-quarters of it dissolved within the 30 minutes.

It's important to keep other tips in mind when taking calcium supplements. Since calcium can reduce iron absorption, take your calcium with a snack rather than a meal. The snack helps to increase the acidity of the stomach, helping to break down the calcium supplement. And, by not taking the calcium with a meal, you will reduce the risk of reducing iron absorption. Also, don't forget to drink an eight-ounce glass of water to help break down the calcium supplement.

For questions regarding calcium supplementation, call your local Penn State Cooperative Extension Office.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

With another holiday weekend upon us, millions of our citizens will be taking to the highways.

Few developments have physically tied our nation closer together than the interstate highway system. Via its seemingly endless stretches of asphalt, we have the capability of traversing the country in a matter of a few days, slowed only by only minor details like sleep, food, "potty" and refueling breaks.

Near miraculous, that is, when one ponders the travails of our forefathers who headed West in those Lancaster-built Conestoga "ship of the prairie" wagons. (And I always wonder just how many millions of times those weary pioneer kids plaintively whined: "Are we there yet?")

For getting from here to there, in a big hurry, our multi-laned interstates are highly efficient. But to really see this country, you'd better get off at the next exit.

And, take to the "back" roads.

The Farmer and I are die-hard back road fans. Unless terribly pressed for time or out of necessity (which is most of the time!), we will avoid like the plague those stretches of highway rife with traffic lights, shopping malls and suburban sprawl. Instead, give us a quiet, tree-lined, scenic, back road, even if it takes a bit longer.

Back roads in this part of the country rarely run straight for more than a few hundred yards. They wind around hillsides of contoured fields and twist past meadows where cows, sheep or horses laze in the grass. They make sudden sharp turns, when old field passageways once separated property lines or long-dead trees and fencerows grew. They pass on intimate terms through farms, sometimes right between the barn and the house. Often you can spot a dog of some sort, sprawled on porch or in the yard, keeping watch, a cat curled up on a windowsill or lawn chair, even the occasional chickens scratching in the gravel road berm.

Streams like to follow back roads — or maybe it's the other way around — crisscrossing back and forth many times in the stretch of a few miles. Back road travelers may glimpse families of ducks splashing in steambeds, watch mini-falls of tumbling water cascading over tiny rock ledges, or enjoy colorful patches of wildflowers which thrive at waters' edge.

Neighbors wave to neighbors and may pause to share a few pieces of local gossip for a moment or two along back roads. Folks are more likely to wave to passing strangers, at the same time wary unfamiliar vehicles or faces passing by. Back roads rarely have "neighborhood watch" signs on them, since residents look out for one another more as a matter of course than by official designation.

Meandering along a back road you can spot kids playing a pick-up game of ball or surprise a doe deer and her fawns nibbling grass. You might stumble onto a roadside patch of berries black raspberry, red raspberry, blackberry — available for the picking. You can spot red-tailed hawks being harassed by crows, come upon a crayon-box-colorful flowerbed in a rural back yard, still see wash flapping on lines and kids fishing in farm ponds.

Farmers favor less-traveled back roads for moving equipment — and for keeping tabs on neighborhood agriculture developments. Back road travels keeps us abreast of cropping patterns, building changes or additions, additions of new tractors or machinery or pickup truck. New tillage, planting and harvest ideas can be gleaned or discarded based on observing neighbors' experiences. And it keeps us all aware of weed control "skippers," wet spots, plugged planters leaving missed spots, infestations by leafhoppers, grasshopper, Johnsongrass, thistle, and hungry critters like groundhogs and deer.

One of my very favorite rural paved-ways is a country drive near the hunting cabin, on a meandering little road which traverses farms, fields and forest stands, crisscrosses a wide mountain-valley stream, and passes along well-kept, rustic homes and nearly hidden hideaways. It's called — appropriately — Back Road.

For a peaceful way to celebrate our nation's birthday, go for a leisurely and scenic drive on a rural road, soaking up the green and the quiet and the beauty and the rural heritage which formed a foundation of our nation we celebrate this weekend.

Treat yourself.

Take a back road.

She was presented with a check for $200 from Dorothy Naugle of the Allied Milk Producers. The association promised an additional $300 as her year progresses.

Former Bedford County Dairy Princess Amy Mearkle emceed the event and also introduced Lyneice Chamberlain, former reigning Bedford County Dairy Princess.

Since then, the role has been carried out by dairy maids. Last year, it was Jennifer Stup and Cindy Mearkle who fulfilled this role.

Dairy maids for 2000 will be Sara Karns, daughter of Kim and Patricia Karns, Clearville; Heidi Zembower, sister of Amy, Bedford Valley; and Dorie Fetter, daughter of Barb and Larry Fetter of Imlertown.

Crawford Princess Delves Into Hotel Disaster

SANDY BRADLEY
Crawford Co. Correspondent

GROVE CITY (Crawford Co.) — Pennsylvania dairy pageants normally consist of an audience watching a group of young women compete for the dairy princess title by performing skits, delivering speeches, and answering questions.

In this year's Crawford County pageant, however, winning contestant Holly Marie Manross distinguished herself not only by entertaining the audience, but by engaging them in her presentation. In a skit "Hotel Dairy Disaster," Holly portrayed a hotel guest who complained to the bellboy that dairy products had been excluded from the hotel's continental breakfasts and other menus. Her primary prop included a large suitcase from which she periodically pulled various brightly colored clothes, tossing them wildly over her shoulder while searching for something relevant to her "conversation" with the fictitious bellboy.

As the clothing (which consisted largely of her real-life barn clothes) flew, the audience laughed loudly - with much clapping when all of the clothes had been strewn and Holly ended the skit by offhandedly telling the bellboy to repack her luggage. In addition to its well delivered humor, part of the skit's appeal might lie in the fact that in real life, 19-year-old Holly attends Mercyhurst Northeast College where she majors in hotel, restaurant and institutional management. Part of her decision to pursue a career in restaurant management, she said, stemmed from her participation in the dairy pageants.

"From being a dairy maid," she explained, "I found out that I like the service industry. It deals with the public and also incorporates the management that I learned on the farm." Still living with her parents Paula and Connie on their Saegertown homestead, Holly, along with her brother, Jason, represents the third generation on the farm. She is responsible for milking its 100 Holsteins during the morning shift, a job she officially began at about age 13. She has participated in 4-H for 11 years, and belongs to the Blooming Valley 4-H Club and the Interstate Exchange Club. She was named one of this year's Crawford County's outstanding 4-Her's.

Holly has 20 cows of her own, some of which she shows each year. In her spare time, she enjoys doing latch-hook as well as planting and weeding flowers.

This year's pageant, Crawford County's 27th annual event, was hosted June 17 by Dale and Carol Richmond, grandparents of outgoing princess Stacey Lynn Agnew. Also competing for the county dairy princess title were Erin Agnew, Krista Jo Braymer, Ashley Hamilton, and Emily Irene Marzka, who was named as the 2000 alternate.

This year's group of dairy maid contestants included Amber Bernarding, Amanda Hamilton, Allison Kemerer, and Emilie Eileen Smith, who also served as dairy maid in 1999. Princess contestants Ashley Hamilton and Erin Agnew were also named as dairy maids. Krista Jo Braymer was recognized for best skit, and Holly Manross and Allison Kemerer were recognized for delivering the best speeches. Rachel Irwin was flower girl, and former dairy princess Heather Riley served as mistress of ceremonies.

This year's panel of judges included Bob Bauer, Terra Ferris, and Susan Slote.

The pageant's impromptu question required each princess and maid contestant to name a song that best described her personality, and required each to justify her answer.

Responses ranged everywhere from contestants not being able to commit to just one song to Holly Manross's answer, which was a song by Shania Twain which describes her, she said, because "it is outgoing and gets people moving."

"Sing it!" several audience members called out to Holly during the pageant, who said that she could not recall the song's name.

Mullen Heads State FFA Organization

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

PEACH BOTTOM (Lancaster Co.) — Within one year, Jimmy Mullen watched his greatest disappointment turn into his most satisfying achievement.

The newly-appointed state FFA president said that one year ago, he ran for state FFA office, and was devastated when he was not appointed a position by the nominating committee.

For years his goal was to become a state FFA officer. He was an early achiever, garnering many awards and working hard in many FFA-related activities.

After losing last year's competition, Mullen decided to put the loss behind him and go on to other things. He entered State University of New York at Alfred State and became active in many events, but the loss kept nagging him. It was like the missing piece to a puzzle.

"I wanted to give back to the program that has given so much to me," the 19-year-old said. So, he again applied for a state FFA position.

After a grueling three-day competition with top achievers throughout the state organization, this year, in a resounding victory, Mullen was named president of the state organization.

He believes the year has matured him and will enable him to bring strong leadership to the role. His motto is a quote from Eleanor Roosevelt, who said, "Yesterday's history, tomorrow's a mystery, and today's a gift."

Assisting him are 10 other officers including another Lancaster Countian — Jenniffer Zimmerman, eastern regional vice president. She is a recent Ephrata High School graduate.

Mullen, son of James and Elaine Mullen, Peach Bottom, credits 4-H with helping him develop many of his skills that were later honed through FFA involvement.

Mullen was only 14 years old when he won the state 4-H public speaking contest. Generally these positions are won by high school seniors. His speech, "Pain Plays," focused on baseball woes of a beginner. Mullen continued his 4-H involvement, and also joined Solanco FFA as soon as he entered high school.

Whenever Mullen needed to chose 4-H or FFA projects, he selected public speaking rather than animal judging projects.

"I liked both the prepared and the extemporaneous competition, but it seemed that I generally did better in the unprepared category," Mullen said.

It is his ability to connect emotionally with the listener that seems to create audience appeal. Mullen explained it this way: "If I need to give a 15-minute presentation on the three problems agriculture faces, I would give more of a personal response for the extemporaneous speech. But for the prepared speech, I would have time to do research and would include information similar to that found in a book."

Mullen considers himself fortunate that he was a high school freshman when two Solanco FFA'ers were named president and vice president for the state FFA: Andy Young and his cousin Joy Young.

"They took a small handful of us freshmen and got us involved in chapter and regional programs and leadership conferences. It was a really neat experience working with state officers," Mullen said.

One of the most prestigious events was attending the National Institute of Cooperative Education (NICE). The week-long event focused on working with cooperatives and combined both learning and entertaining experiences.

On the final evening, Mullen was asked to serve as the master of ceremonies for an evening banquet with attendance of 1,500 adults and another 1,500 youth. He was selected when leaders read in his application that he had extensive public speaking involvement.

Mullen was only 16 years old at the time, one of the youngest students in attendance, but he remained calm and relaxed throughout the evening.

He must have done a good job, because the next year, Mullen was invited back as a second-year scholar, only one of five students across the state. He worked in a teaching capacity with students his age and older.

For five years, Mullen placed in the top 10 in 4-H state public speaking competition.

"I finished my last year in 4-H with a kick," Mullen said. In addition to excelling in public speaking, he also won the top physical fitness award with his first try.

But his goal to become a state FFA officer didn't materialize.

"It was disappointing, and I did not intend to come back," Mullen said of FFA involvement.

He went to SUNY-Alfred State University to study dairy herdsmanship. He enjoyed working on the school farm. While there, he was asked to judge three FFA speaking contests and to act as a visual judge for livestock judging competition.

Talking with FFA members and hearing of their involvement as state officers made Mullen feel as if he were really missing a lot.

After much wrestling with the pros and cons, Mullen asked for an application to reapply for consideration.

"I went in with more will power, more knowledge of how the judging process worked, and I wasn't as nervous or as hard on myself," Mullen said. But that didn't calm him from roller coaster emotions as he sat through the final judging.

Names were called for the following offices: Amos Aurand, sentinel; Michael Livingston, chaplain; Tony Lee Resh, treasurer; Kristen Pfeifer, secretary; Lisa Allen, reporter; Jessica Hyland, western region vice president; Heidi Good, north central region vice president; Andrew Flinchbaugh, south central region vice president; Jenniffer Zimmerman, eastern region vice president; and Jennifer Whitman, vice president.

"The only position left to be called was president, and I hadn't applied for that," Mullen said. He thought he'd lost again until he heard the words: "the second time is your best time...."

For Mullen, the second time running was indeed his best time. As president, he's putting his studies on hold in order to devote his time to the FFA. His employers at Graywood Farms, Maryland, are allowing him an extremely flexible work schedule to enable him to travel throughout Pennsylvania to fulfil his FFA responsibilities.

Since Mullen does not live on a farm, his decision to pursue a degree and career in dairy herdsmanship is surprising to some people.

Mullen explains that his parents farmed for eight or nine years after they married. They had two daughters. When the parents determined that probably neither of the daughters would be interested in taking over the family farm, they moved away from the farm.

Mullen was born after three sisters. From the beginning, he was intrigued with visiting farms of relatives. He began helping at an early age — picking corn, throwing hay bales, and typical farm chores. In high school, he got a job on a nearby farm. At college, he was selected as an intern on the college farm.

"It was a great honor and learning experience to be selected as a freshman," Mullen said. The intern positions normally go to second-year students.

Mullen has worked with dairies that range from 80-170 milking cows.

"All I ever wanted to do was work as a dairy herdsman for a large dairy," Mullen said. He has his sights set on landing a job with a Mid-western dairy with a 2,000-3,000 head herd.

Some of Mullen's other interests and involvements also prepared Mullen for working with others. At Solanco, Mullen was a member of the Lancaster County Youth Peace Council, formed by a nonprofit organization that selects high school students to solve school violence. At first, the organization was run by adults. Later, Mullen was named president, the first student president of the organization. Mullen worked to have middle school students involved in the program.

He said, "I thought it was important to have students become involved in solving disagreements peacefully at a younger age rather than waiting until they were older."

At school, Mullen was active in band, orchestra, musicals, and wrestling. He is the only 4-year letterman in wrestling at Solanco. He also ran track and fieldfor two years.

At church, Mullen is also active in the senior high youth group, bell choir, and senior choir.

Mullen said that he enjoys learning and leadership. The 4-H motto continues to guide his life in "making the best better."

Mullen is meeting with the other state officers to form a strategy to touch lives in each of the 147 FFA chapters throughout the state.

"I have big footsteps to follow," Mullen said of the examples of Andy Young, Joy Young, and Bertina Robinson, former state officers from Solanco High School. "I will try to fill those footsteps to the best of my ability."

Jimmy Mullen is the new FFA president. For one year, he will travel extensively to work with leaders of the state's 147 chapters. After a disappointing loss in running for state FFA office last year, Mullen is proof of the old adage, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

As FFA eastern vice president, Jen Zimmerman is booked for the year with meetings and responsibilities she needs to fulfill.

Zimmerman Eager To Pay Back FFA

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

REINHOLDS (Lancaster Co.) — Staying calm under stress is one of the qualities a state FFA officer needs.

After completing a three-page application, six rounds of interviews, a speech, and the scrutiny of nine judges, Jen Zimmerman felt stressed, but outwardly, the 18-year-old remained calm. Unlike some of the other 19 applicants vying for a state position on the FFA officers team, Jen was able to eat and sleep during the three-day judging process.

On the last day of the FFA convention, with 1,300 people in attendance, the nominees waited for their names to be called.

"We had no clue who won or didn't. We're all sitting there inwardly pleading, "Please,"' Jen said.

To hear her name called after four years of working toward the goal filled Jen with euphoria.

"It's a great honor and it gives me a chance to pay back all that FFA has done for me," she said.

The nominating committee consisted of nine FFA members, two from each of four regional districts and one at large, but none from the chapter a nominee represented.

The 19 nominees worked together in group activities as they were closely monitored by the nominating committee members.

Examined closely also is each person's high school involvement with FFA.

Jen, a member of the Ephrata High School Cloister Chapter, served as both chapter and county FFA president.

Jen raised sheep for many of her projects. She won numerous top awards locally and statewide for her Horned Dorsets and Southdowns. Her brother Jimmy raises Cheviots and Hampshires. Together they have about 35 ewes on their parents', Jay and JoAnn Zimmerman's, farmette.

This year at the state Farm Show, Jen had the reserve grand champion carcass lamb, a great accomplishment because the lamb was bred and owned by Jen rather than purchased from big-name breeders.

For the past two years, Jen showed the supreme champion ewe over all breeds at Ephrata Fair. She said winning the supreme champion at Elizabethtown Fair in 1995 really motivated her to try to excel in sheep breeding. Jen was also a consistent showmanship champion at local fairs.

Throughout her FFA involvement, Jen also raised capons,

Tioga County To Host 10th Annual Farm-City Day

CAROLYN MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

WELLSBORO (Tioga Co.) — Sunset Mountains Farm, owned by Doug and Jenny Lawton and family, will be the site of the 10th annual Tioga County Farm City Day Saturday, July 8.

Farm City Day is a dream come true for chairperson Sherri Butters, who wanted to celebrate the relationship between farm and nonfarm groups.

"We want to promote a better understanding of the farmer's way of life as well as provide an opportunity to explore the interdependence of farming, the business community, land use, food production, and our environment," said Butters.

Without a host farm, however, this event could not be possible.

Sunset Mountain Farm is a 340-acre tract of land nestled in the heart of Tioga County, near Wellsboro. During the Farm-City Day event, the farm will be officially recognized as a Century Farm. One of the original tracts of land was purchased in 1887 by Edwin Wilcox, one of Doug's ancestors.

After graduating from high school, Doug began farming with his parents full time. They eventually formed a partnership and the herd size grew in number from 34 to 55 cows and later to 63 cows.

In 1982, Doug married Jenny, each bringing two children into the marriage. Scott works full time on the farm. Sue, Amy, and Susie, along with four grandchildren, all live close by and help on the farm when needed.

In 1983 Doug and Jenny began to purchase the farm from his parents by buying his father's half of the cows and machinery. They then leased the farm land from his parents until purchasing it in 1988.

In 1993 and 1994, Doug, Jenny, and Scott also operated a neighboring farm, bringing the total number of cows up to 100. In March 1995, the second herd was sold to concentrate on milking at the home farm.

Now the home farm houses 135 Holsteins with a rolling herd average of 22,000 pounds of milk with 70 milking animals.

The Lawton family raises 100 acres of corn and 110 acres of hay. This year they seeded 15 acres of oats and 15 acres of barley.

Visitors are welcome from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and everyone is encouraged to register for the door prizes, including a year's supply of ice cream donated by Schwan's Sales Enterprises and a one-year supply of free Exxon gasoline tickets donated by Acorn Markets.

The day's events also include agricultural demonstrations and exhibits, old and new machinery exhibits, contests for young and old, and a petting zoo. Wagon tours of the farm are also a highlight of the day's planned activities.

To help fund the Farm City Day events, which are free to the public, an auction with products ranging from tools to food to theater tickets will be conducted as well.

beef, and market swine. She was also active in 4-H Woolies Club and 4-H livestock judging.

She would like to show sheep at local fairs this year, but isn't sure how things will work out because of FFA leadership demands.

Jen works part-time at the Ephrata Agway, a job she attained through the FFA work experience project. On the job, Jen serves as cashier, helps customers find fertilizer and other items, and answers many questions regarding sheep care.

Jen was accepted at the Penn State Berks Campus for ag business, but will put college on hold to devote full time to FFA. She is working toward an American Degree, the national FFA award.

"I'm thinking about changing my major to animal science and minor in ag business," Jen said.

"FFA has really helped me with public speaking skills, meeting people, and all-around. I got into showing animals through FFA. There are so many opportunities in FFA and so many career options.

"This is my year to give back to FFA. It's a privilege to represent the entire state's 80,000 membership," Jen said.

QUESTION — Dawn Black, Chambersburg, is looking for a recipe for homemade butter pecan ice cream. She had clipped one from this column several years ago but misplaced it. If you clipped the recipe, please send it in since we do not keep a file of recipes.

QUESTION — It's canning season, writes C. Alleman, Hummelstown. She wants recipes for Vidalia onion relish, pepper cabbage, tomato salsa, and pickled vegetables. Any helpful hints will be appreciated by Carol, who writes that she grabs the paper to read "Cook's Corner" first. She loves cooking and collects cookbooks and recipes, which she uses.

QUESTION — A mother wants ideas and recipes to encourage her children to eat more vegetables.

QUESTION — Judy Ulrich, York, wants the recipe for Honey Pecan Crunch, a pie that she heard was a winner in state Farm Show competition. The pie was shown on television, and she remembers the pecans were lined up beautifully across the top of the pie.

QUESTION — Shirley Miller, Nazareth, would like to find a recipe or booklet about potato flour.

QUESTION — Maria Dalrymple, Shinglehouse, writes that a deceased aunt used to make a fabulous strawberry pie. Unfortunately the recipe was never given to the family in written form, and they miss it every strawberry season. The pie was called President Dwight David Eisenhower's Favorite Strawberry Pie. Any readers have a copy to send?

QUESTION — Herman Bean, Easton, writes that he is 78 years old. He remembers his grandmother made molasses cookies when he was a small boy. His mother still made them at 95 years of age but died 10 years ago and took the recipe with her. The dough was cut with flower or boy and girl-shaped cookie cutters. When baked, the cookies were about an inch thick, 4-inches high, and 2- or 3-inches wide. They were sort of a grayish color, soft, and had to be put into a can for a couple of days before eating. Bean said, he believes the cookies are a "Dutch favorite."

QUESTION — A Lititz reader is having a houseful of company for a week. This means lots of meal ideas. She desperately needs recipes that can be prepared ahead of time or quick ones to put together at the last minute and any other helpful hints to remain sane while preparing food and entertaining guests.

ANSWER — For the reader who requested a recipe for apricot bread, Lois Sensenig, Coatesville, sends this recipe.

Apricot Bread

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
2 cups sugar
1½ teaspoon salt
4 eggs
2 small jars apricot baby food
½ cup chopped nuts
1½ cups vegetable oil

Mix flour, baking soda, cinnamon, sugar, and salt in a large bowl. Add eggs, baby food, nuts, and oil. Mix well. Pour batter into two greased and floured loaf pans. Bake 60 minutes at 350 degrees.

ANSWER — Janet Spangler, York, sends a recipe for French Filler, which can be inserted inside doughnuts or as an cake icing. She writes that the icing is creamy and smooth.

French Filler

Cook together over low heat until thick, stirring constantly:
1½ tablespoons flour
½ cup milk

Cool thoroughly. Then mix with the following ingredients:
½ cup shortening
½ cup sugar
Dash salt

Beat until smooth with electric mixer as flour mixture is lumpy.

This covers a 9x13-inch cake. Janet often makes a cake using a white or yellow cake mix. She adds 1 teaspoon coconut extract and mixes according to package directions. After it is baked, she adds ½ teaspoon coconut extract to the French Filler and frosts the cake. Sprinkle with shredded coconut.

Janet writes that this is delicious. She believes any flavor desired can be substituted for the coconut extract. Diabetics can substitute Frutose for sugar.

ANSWER — Gloria Sweigart, Manheim, sent some recipes requested for hot and cold dishes for picnics and covered dish meals. More are needed, readers, so keep sending them.

Macaroni Salad

1 pound box macaroni

Cook macaroni as directed on package. Rinse in cold water in large colander, drain well. Add:
4 to 5 ribs chopped celery
½ cup diced onion
½ cup shredded carrot
4 hard cooked eggs, diced

Toss all ingredients together, set aside.
In large saucepan, combine the following:
6 eggs, well beaten
1½ cups water
1½ cups apple cider vinegar
1½ cups granulated sugar
2 heaping tablespoons flour
Salt and pepper to taste
2 teaspoons prepared mustard

Cook mixture over medium heat until smooth and thickened. Cool. Add macaroni mixture. Mix together. Makes 1 gallon.

Note: This dressing can also be used for potato salad, but omit the carrots and use 6-8 slices crisply fried and crumbled bacon.

Baked Scalloped Potatoes

6 cups potatoes
1 medium onion, sliced thin
Grated parmesan cheese

Grease a 13x9-inch baking pan. Peel and slice potatoes. Layer potatoes, onion, and cheese in casserole. In a mixing bowl, combine:
3 eggs, beaten until fluffy
¾ cup milk
¾ cup water
Salt and pepper to taste
2 tablespoons flour

Mix well and pour mixture over potatoes. Top with seasoned bread crumbs and dot with butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until done.

ANSWER — J. Alleman, Hummelstown, wanted a foolproof recipe for Montgomery Pie. Thanks to Gloria Sweigart, Manheim, for sending this one.

Montgomery Pie

Prepare three 9-inch pie crusts, set aside. In large bowl, mix together the following batter for the bottom part:
2 cups granulated sugar
3 cups all-purpose flour
½ cup shortening
1 cup whole milk
2 eggs
3 teaspoons baking powder

Mix like a cake, divide batter into three pie shells.
In another bowl, mix together:
1 cup molasses
1 cup light brown sugar
1 egg
1 pint boiling water
1 tablespoon flour

Pour top mixture over batter in pie shells. Bake at 450 degrees for 15 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake for 30 minutes. Pie reverses mixtures as it bakes. The juicy party will be on the bottom and the cake part on top when baked.

ANSWER — To the Lititz reader who wanted ideas on fast meals, here are some from a Manheim reader.

Mulched To Death?

NEWARK, Del. — According to Bob Mulrooney, Cooperative Extension plant pathologist at the University of Delaware, mulching trees and shrubs is a yard maintenance practice with many benefits such as holding in moisture and keeping down the growth of weeds. But, he warns, overmulching kills plants.

"A mountain of mulch, piled high against the tree trunk, does not kill a tree immediately — it's a slow death sentence," says Mulrooney. "In fact, overmulching is a leading cause of death in azaleas, rhododendrons, dogwood trees, and hollies."

Oxygen starvation is one reason plants die under too much mulch. Tree roots can suffocate.

Symptoms, which may take several years to appear, include off-color, yellowing foliage, abnormally small leaves, poor twig growth, and dieback of older branches. By the time the symptoms are noticeable, it is generally too late to correct the problem.

An even more serious problem occurs at the root flare when piles of mulch are placed directly against the trunks of trees and shrubs. Trunk tissue cannot survive a continually moist environment. When mulch is piled against trunks, gas exchange decreases, stressing, and ultimately killing, the inner bark issue.

This leaves the trunk open to fungal and bacterial diseases, which need moisture to spread and reproduce. Trunk diseases gain a foothold into the moist, decaying bark tissue under the mulch. Once established, the disease organisms invade the inner bark, starving the plant to death. Then the bark beetles and borers come, attracted to stressed plants. These insects expedite the decline.

"Once the inner bark dies, the system for transporting water and nutrients is impaired," Mulrooney says. "The entire health of the plant is affected. If wet conditions continue long enough, the next layer and the roots starve since they receive none of the essential photosynthates produced by the leaves.

"Piles of mulch next to the trunk may also provide cover for chewing rodents such as mice and meadow voles," warns Mulrooney. "These rodents live under the warm mulch in the winter and chew on the nutritious inner bark, an activity that often goes unnoticed until the following spring."

When using mulch in the landscape, do not exceed a three-inch depth. The exception is on poorly drained soils-mulch depth should be no more than two- inches, especially on shallow-rooted plants such as annuals. Coarse-textured mulches can be deeper because of better oxygen diffusion into the soil. For fine-textured mulch, such as the double-shredded varieties, you may need only one to two-inches.

"Dig down to see how deep the mulch really is," advises Mulrooney. "A light raking of existing mulch may be all that is needed to break through the crusted or compacted layers that repel water. Pull mulch back from plant stems and trunks — three to five-inches away from young plants, and eight to 12-inches away from mature tree trunks."

Play: How Important Is It?

Summer is a great time to play. There are more daylight hours, lots of sun, lots of choices, and for many, more time. Often families take vacation during the summer meaning that they spend more time together. Vacations can be filled with projects needing to be completed, but that isn't really play. Play is doing something that you really enjoy and brings joy to your entire body.

If you have watched young children play, they have the right idea. They use their imagination, often their entire body, and involve someone else. Sometimes that might even be an imaginary playmate. Play might also include duplicating what they see adults do.

Can we take a lesson from children?

I say yes. If you are a busy adult (and who isn't) maybe it is time to take a few minutes off to play. Play can be very stimulating. It can get your creative energy flowing, make you more social, improve your socialability, and keep you physically fit!

All that from playing. Then why don't we do more of it?

Adults have a hundred reasons why they don't play. It might make them look silly, they don't have time, it takes too much money, are a few of the excuses. As with anything we do, we will rationalize why we do or don't do something.

Playing is the job of children and it should be a requirement of maintaining your adult status. We learn so much about life through playing. According to the author, Robert Fulghum in his book "All I Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" he explains that we learn everything from how to share, to put things back, to clean up your own mess when we are children. We also learned how to play. If we can remember all those other lessons — even the one about picking up your own things — maybe we can remember how to play.

If you have children or grandchildren, this will be an easy job. Put down the paper, well, after you finish this edition and find the kids. It won't matter if you decide to color yes, you can color out of the lines; or roll around in the grass. In fact, while you are down in the grass, stop for a moment and look at the clouds. Can you see Captain Hook marching across the sky, or an elephant with a whale's tail standing on his head?

Playing can be a bit physical if you chose. When was the last time to hit a softball, square danced, or sat on top of the monkey bars? Maybe all that isn't your idea of fun, but perhaps walks through some of beautiful state parks can be a form of play. Not only is it a great way of using your large muscles, but an opportunity to get some fresh air, examine some new plants, and give you a change of pace.

- Mix meatloaves with recipe desired. Divide mixture into small loaves and freeze until needed. The small loaves will thaw and bake faster than the large one.
- Cook and debone chicken, turkey, or beef. Make gravy, cool and freeze. Serve over noodles, rice or waffles. Salad and fresh fruit, complete a meal. Cakes and cookies can be made ahead and frozen. Ice cake after thawing.
- Stir fry chicken breast strips, add frozen veggies and well-drained canned baby shrimp. Serve over rice or as a side dish.
- Bake potatoes in microwave. Use a microwaveable dish, add water to cover bottom, cover with lid or plastic wrap. Thaw when ready to use.
- Most soups can be made ahead of time, frozen, and placed in a crockpot to heat. Try beef vegetable, chicken corn, and ham and bean. Ham and green beans and pork and sauerkraut can also be made ahead of time and placed in a crockpot to heat.

THE TENNIS TOURNEY

In 1999, Pete Sampras won his third straight Wimbledon title He was joined on the women's side by Lindsay Davenport, which made it the first time since 1981 that two Americans had won the singles titles

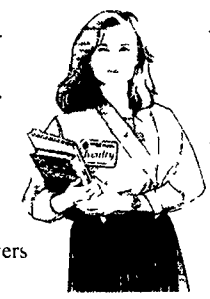
The win was Sampras' sixth in seven years He has just one less win than the all-time record holder William Renshaw, who played in the 1880s Martina Navratilova is the winningest female with seven wins

The tournament started back in the 1870s as a men's only event, the Lawn Tennis Championships, which was played at The All England Croquet and Lawn Tennis Club. It wasn't until 1884 that women played

A new stadium in 1922 brought more popularity to the tournament But during World War II, the stadium was struck by a bomb, and it took nine years before the stadium was totally rebuilt

As one of the biggest sports competitions in the world, Wimbledon champions win big money In the 1998 Wimbledon Championship, more than $11 million in prize money was awarded

So You Want To Be...



When people decide to buy or sell a house, they usually call on a real estate agent for help. That's because a real estate agent knows how much money homes are worth, what neighborhoods are like, what laws apply to buying or selling a home and where buyers can get a loan to buy a home.

A real estate agent meets with the people wanting to buy a home During this time, home buyers decide what kind of house they want and how much money they can spend Then the agent takes the buyers to see houses for sale

When people want to sell a home, they call a real estate agent to help them decide how much to sell it for The home sellers also count on the real estate agent to bring in people who are interested in buying a home

For all the work helping people buy and sell homes, a real estate agent usually gets a percentage of the sale of the home.

Even though a real estate agent works out of an office, he/she spends most of the time out of it showing homes and looking for homes that might be for sale soon A real estate agent usually works more than 40 hours a week. Most of the time, the agent has to work evenings and weekends because that's when people are able to look at homes

by

Ida Risser

From time to time over the past few years, I have written about our children. The one that I have not mentioned is Philip, our youngest son. He lives on the farm and boards heifers for several dairymen. He also has a full-time engineering job in Lancaster County.

Over the years, I cut out newspaper articles about our children and kept them in separate envelopes. This morning I reread a few about Philip and I admit it, I am amazed at everything that he has done.

As the older children were in 4-H Clubs and, I was a Community Club leader for more than 20 years, he was active in 4-H for nine years. He traveled with them on several exchange trips and hosted members from other states. One year he was Pennsylvania's high individual judge in the 4-H potato judging at Harrisburg.

When he went to Penn State University, he was active in many honor groups and was an officer also. Our children were lucky to receive many scholarships. He was the state winner of an agri-business careers scholarship in the 4-H National Awards Program.

At Penn State, he graduated with 15 more credits than required for graduation. Then he went to the University of Wisconsin for his master's degree in agricultural engineering. For three years he worked in Chicago for Case International before coming home to farm with his father.

At this time, he is on a long vacation which has taken him west to Wyoming with his family. They have a pop-up trailer and will have many experiences to share when they return.

Although Karen Sellers is a registered nurse, county Farm Women president, and active in many church and community activities, she finds time to work in the many flower beds on the family farm.

Karen Sellers Heads Lebanon County Farm Women

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Karen Sellers leads 20 societies with 274 members as president of the Lebanon County Society of Farm Women.

That is demanding in itself, but Karen also has had the daunting task of serving as president twice when the Lebanon County Farm Women hosted the Spring Rally — this year and in 1983 — the only years the county ever hosted the annual event.

"All the societies really help out, but I can breathe a lot easier when the day is over," Karen said of being responsible for about 1,000 guests from across the state.

Karen and her husband Ken live in a house built in 1796. Ken's grandparents purchased the 300-acre farm about 75 years ago.

Although many older stone homes have a date carved in stone, the Sellers farmhouse is unique in that it has several sentences carved above the entrance. The Sellers had the German words translated into English and discovered the words were actually a prayer: "God, protect this house and all that go in and out. Protect it from fire, storm, wind, hail, and with your hand from all danger. David and Emma Emsminger, 1796."

The Seller's 1796 farmhouse has a German prayer carved into the stone above the front porch.

Although Karen grew up on a dairy farm, she said things were done quite differently on her farm. She didn't know there were registered cows until she married Ken. But the biggest difference was that Ken wasn't as tied down to the farm as her parents, but took time off for vacations and other activities.

"The farm is a great place to raise kids and work together as a family," Karen said.

The Sellers have three adult children and two granddaughters. Son Craig and wife Meranda farm in partnership with Ken and Karen. Another son, Kevin, helps on the farm as needed. Although Karen works as a registered nurse, she helps on the farm every other weekend.

Craig and Meranda recently took over responsibility for the 70 registered Holsteins and 80 head of young stock. That leaves more time for Ken to pursue his custom combining business, for which Karen takes care of the bookwork.

For family partnerships to work, Karen said, "requires good communication and the realization that everyone's input is important. Just because we are older and have more experience doesn't mean we know everything."

As the county president, Karen is invited to other counties for their annual conventions.

Karen believes Farm Women membership is an ideal place to develop friendships and to help with community needs. Karen is one of 16 members of Society 11. In addition to county and state projects, the individual societies also hold bake sales and donate money to help fund local nonprofit organizations who help those in needy.

Some of Karen's fondest memories of Farm Women are of making meals for farm and city week tours, playing Bingo with nursing home residents, and holding treasure hunts and workshops. During a treasure hunt, one of the requirements was for members to go to the police station and have the police photograph them. The photo was required as proof.

Karen also serves on the county extension's family living committee. She is a member of the Farm Women's chorus, sings in the church Christmas cantata, and teaches Sunday school. She is a women's auxiliary treasurer for the United Church of Christ Church Home and often drives a mini-bus to transport residents to shopping trips, picnics, craft sales, restaurants, and other events.

Karen's husband, Ken, is board treasurer for the Lebanon County Expo. As his wife, Karen sometimes helps out with unexpected duties such as shoveling snow off the expo roof. During the Lebanon Area Fair, Karen volunteers at the refreshment stand.

In her spare time, Karen enjoys sewing and reading. She collects carousel horses and porcelain dolls. She also enjoys cooking.

She shares the following recipes with readers:

FRUIT COCKTAIL PUDDING

3 boxes instant vanilla pudding
8-ounces cream cheese
1 large can fruit cocktail, drained
6 cups milk

Beat cream cheese with a little milk until nice and smooth. Then alternate between adding pudding and remaining milk. Spoon in fruit cocktail.

LEMON SQUARES

1 cup flour
½ cup butter, softened
¼ cup confectioners' sugar
1 cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
2 eggs
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Cream together flour, butter, and confectioners' sugar. Press evenly into bottom of ungreased square pan. Bake 20 minutes. Beat remaining ingredients until light and fluffy, about 3 minutes. Pour over hot crust and bake about 25 minutes longer. Cool and cut into 2-inch squares.

Tammy, Brian Jr., Katie, and Brad sort strawberries to fill orders.

Katie and Tammy work in the greenhouse, which has developed into a sunup to sundown business.

Hardworking Koontz Family Has Many Projects

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Brian does the field work. Tammy raises flowers, vegetables, and strawberries. Together they milk 60 or more Holsteins. The Koontz family takes every advantage of utilizing the 200 acres they farm.

The Koontz' three children, Brian, 11; Brad, 10; and Katie, 8; are just as busy helping mom and dad with all the chores and taking care of their 4-H projects.

This year, for the first time, they will be participating in the Bedford County Fair with their Allegheny Foothills 4-H projects of sheep and goats. Their 4-H leader, Michelle Anderson, DVM, has jokingly told them they have the most misbehaved goats she ever saw. The 4-kids are as lively as their three owners.

Brad likes the milking and proudly says he is the best helper mom and dad have. Brian Jr. prefers the machinery, and Katie lends a hand where she can but especially likes the flowers.

Two years ago, Brian encouraged Tammy's horticulture talents by building her a greenhouse. When he saw that project take off, he built her the second one.

The first was 22x96-feet. The new greenhouse is 22X48-feet. If everything continues in an upward direction, they may add a third next year.

"We don't use new parts if we don't have to," Tammy explained. "We've attended auctions and become very innovative with our heating and watering systems."

Her flowers bloom so profusely, it didn't take long for word-of-mouth advertising to bring a steady stream of customers searching for bedding plants, potted plants, and hanging baskets.

The walnut-sized strawberries are sold before they are picked and Tammy has trouble filling all of the orders.

She has sold vegetables to local restaurants but also has a good business selling to those who want to put fresh veggies on the table or in jars.

Tammy's plant work begins in November when she plants the seeds in the basement growing room of the 1894 farmhouse, which they are also busy remodeling.

Each year Tammy's inventory of flowers increases and while she basically plants annuals she is experimenting with perennials. Vinca, petunias, snap dragons, and shasta daisies, are a few of the colorful species which cause the greenhouse to look like a picture post card.

Produce includes mostly tomatoes, peppers, and green beans.

Eventually, Tammy hopes to expand into cut flowers.

"We're just a busy farm family," Tammy says. "We work from sunup to sundown, but we like it, and we keep trying."

Tammy and Brian met while they were both in 4-H. They started with 17 cows and a rented farm and feel they have made excellent progress in less then 13 years although it means nonstop work.

Developing Rules Of The House

Rules play an important role for children on their own because the rules help anticipate problems and arrange for solutions in advance. Rules reflect parent(s)' expectations and define boundaries for safety. If children understand the reasons for the rules, they are more likely to follow them.

Guidelines For Establishing Effective Rules

• Try to have the child participate in creating the rules.

• State rules clearly, specifically, and in a positive manner. For example: "The breakfast dishes should be done and the table set for dinner by 5 p.m."

• If the rule involves a task, make it a necessary one and appropriate for the child. It may be unreasonable for a nine-year-old to prepare dinner but appropriate for him or her to set the table.

• Build in an enforceable consequence with the rule. For example: After your math homework is done, you may watch television for a half hour. When parents are not present to enforce the rules, enforcement should begin shortly after parents arrive home. Remember to check and enforce rules consistently.

• Remember that mistakes can happen. Firmness, patience, and flexibility will help you and the child.

Some topics where rules might help are homework, chores, play privileges, care for siblings, snack preparation, and television watching. What are others for your family?

Safety Skills

Personal safety skills will help children protect themselves as well as reduce fears when they're on their own. Teach them this information gradually rather than all at once. Too much information at one time is difficult to remember.

Present your children with a number of situations and have them act out their responses. Simply telling them the information is rarely effective. It is quickly forgotten.

The Telephone

The telephone is the lifeline between parent and child. If your work situation permits, have your child call when he or she arrives from school.

A call from parents once or twice daily can provide a feeling of security. A list of emergency numbers should be posted by the phone and children should be taught how to use them and what to say. Remember, it's a good idea to practice making these calls.

The phone can also provide a child with companionship. Some children on their own will hold long conversations daily with friends who are also on their own at home. If this is a matter of concern to you because you cannot get through when you try to reach your child, establishing some rules will help.

One way is to set a maximum time per call — for example, 10 minutes maximum with a 15-minute (minimum) interval between calls. Have a kitchen timer available near the phone for this purpose. Or, make a rule that the phone must be clear for five minutes beginning every quarter hour.

The 4-H leader told Katie, Brad, and Brian that they have the most misbehaved goats she has ever seen.

Another strategy is to establish set times when the child cannot be on the phone — for example, 3:45 p.m. to 4:15 p.m. this enables you to contact the child during that time.

A major concern of parents with children on their own is to keep outsiders from knowing that there is no adult in the home. In some families children are told not to answer the phone at all unless the "special ring" or "magic code" is used. A special ring or a magic code is a certain number or a combination of rings that the child identifies and knows that he or she can answer.

In some families, children on their own answer all calls. Directions like the following can be given to the child and practiced.

• Answer the phone pleasantly. Do not give your name.

• Never tell a caller that you are home alone.

• Tell the caller that your parent can't come to the phone right now.

• Take a message-name and phone number of caller.

• If a message seems like it is very important and cannot wait until a parent comes home, call the parent at work.

• Do not give anyone your parent's phone number at work.

• If the same person calls more than once and you do not know the person, call your parent or contact person.

• If someone calls with a prank call — tries to play a joke, teases, threatens to hurt you, or scares you — hang up immediately and call your parent. Don't answer the phone or door until parent or contact person gets home.

Cure Kid's Weekday Blahs: Hands-On Fun With History

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The Hershey Museum will be hosting a full set of historical make-and-take hands-on activities in the Museum this summer, Mondays through Fridays from 1 p.m.-5 p.m. beginning June 26-Aug. 18.

All activities are assisted by the Museum's youth volunteer PastMasters, and are included with Museum admission.

Kids will experience a variety of fun activities that change daily. In olden days, children often made things for themselves or their families that served a function.

Young visitors will be led by volunteer Past Masters in rope making or candle dipping, and can try their hand at the loom. Leisure time in the past provided children with opportunities to make their own toys using wood and found objects, such as the wooden toys of colonial times, or the shuttlecocks of the Native Americans.

And let's not forget about chocolate...try working the small running assembly line, and taste varieties of chocolate and learn why they are different. Even more special activities are planned, surprising young visitors all summer long. The Museum's Discovery Room will be open for more hands-on fun.

Activities are designed for children ages 5 and up. PastMasters will teach each craft, one-on-one, and kids can take them home.

Hershey Museum is open dail 10 a.m.-5 p.m., through Memori al Day, and 10 a.m.-6 p.m. fron Memorial Day through Labo Day. Admission is $6 for adult $5.50 for seniors 62+, $3 fo youths 3-15, and children unde three are free.

Keep It Clean Briefs

When vacuuming in damp or moist areas, such as kitchens, bathrooms or basements, change the filter bag frequently. Bacteria or molds that collect in the filter bag will multiply in moist conditions.

Clean up spills from raw meat juices and raw eggs with disposable paper towels to avoid contaminating kitchen towels, dishcloths and sponges.

Wash kitchen towels, dishcloths, and sponges frequently in hot water and liquid household (chlorine) bleach (if safe for the fabric). The bleach will disinfect them and help remove odors. Only chlorine bleach disinfects (kills germs); color-safe bleaches and detergents with bleach do not disinfect.

Child Costs

USDA released a new report finding that a family with a child born in 1999 can expect to spend about $160,140 ($237,000 when adjusted for inflation) for food, shelter, and other necessities to raise that child over the next seventeen years.

The yearly estimate for middle-income, two-parent families ranges from $8,450 to $9,530, depending on the age of the child.

Housing costs are the single largest expenditure on a child, averaging 33 percent of the total cost. Food was the second largest expense, averaging 18 percent of the total.

Geographic variations also affect the cost, with the urban west being the highest cost area, followed by the urban northeast and urban south. The urban midwest and rural areas have the lowest child-rearing expenses.

Managing Credit Cards

American consumers owe $541 billion on their credit cards, which is double the level of 1990, according to the New Road Map Foundation.

When you are creating your financial budget, no more than 10 to 15 percent of your spending should go toward installment debt. This includes credit cards.

If you are paying more than 20 percent of your disposable income towards installment debt then you could be looking at some trouble ahead.

The best advice about using credit cards is to pay them off and keep them paid off. You can leave them at home, and use them only for vacations when you don't want to carry large amounts of cash.

If that is too drastic a measure, then I suggest that you use only one credit card that doesn't have an annual fee.

Some other tips about using credit cards include the following:

- Know the Annual Percentage Rate (APR), and the Periodic Rate. The periodic rate is the APR divided by the number of billing cycles (usually 12) per year.
- Know the "grace period," which is the number of days between the posting date of a transaction and the due date.
- Shop for the "best" credit card available in terms of interest rate, services, etc.
- Read the small print on the statement for "hidden" charges.
- Pay your charges completely every month. If you can't pay off your bill every month, try to pay more than the minimum.
- Set a limit on your spending. Buy with cash. You're less likely to make spur of the moment purchases, and people tend to find it harder to use cash than plastic.
- Do exceed your credit limit.
- Never use a cash advance for living expenses. Cash advances do not earn a grace period, interest accrues at once, in addition you will have to pay the transaction fee.
- Debt is often the greatest roadblock to families wanting to control their spending and savings. You can begin to get your spending under control by managing you credit cards.

Tips On Spotting Fad Diets

- Claims to or implies to produce a quick weight loss of more than one to two pounds per week. Slow, gradual weight loss increases the chance of weight loss success and of keeping weight off over the long term.
- Promotes magical or miracle foods. No foods can undo the long-term effects of overeating and not exercising or melt away fat.
- Restricts or eliminates certain foods, recommends certain foods in large quantities, insists on eating specific food combinations, or offers rigid, inflexible menus.
- Implies that weight can be lost and maintained without exercise and other lifestyle changes.
- Relies heavily on undocumented case histories, testimonials, and anecdotes but has no scientific research to back claims.
- Contradicts what most trusted health professional groups say, or makes promises that sound too good to be true.

Tour Aims To Improve Profitability, Ohio Farm Sustainability

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Raising and selling wholesale vegetables, particularly tomatoes, is a time-consuming, labor-intensive job.

In 1997, the stress of managing a wholesale vegetable operation was starting to wear on Shane Pugh. A change was needed, so that in June he and his wife, Vicki, opened a farm market on their farm north of Marietta and began selling most of their produce directly to consumers.

"I wasn't trying to improve profit as much as I was trying to improve my quality of life by cutting time and stress," Pugh said. "For the amount of money that's being invested, the profit is higher, the amount of hours and stress is down, and my quality of life is greatly improved. The profit will improve even more, eventually. It just takes a while to get a good customer base."

The Pugh's Doak Farm and Doak Farm Market in Washington County is one of the stops in the 2000 Ohio Farm Profitability Tour Series. The series consists of 22 farm tours across Ohio, beginning with the 900-acre certified organic Wenger Farm in Wayne County on July 1 and ending with Saum Family Farms, a diversified operation in Fairfield County that grows Christmas and nursery trees to complement more traditional commodities, on Oct. 3.

The Doak Farm is the tour's fifth stop and will take place July 21.

"There is a lot of risk involved when growing something for wholesale. By raising vegetables for retail, you cut labor, time, and the amount of money put out to raise a crop," Pugh said. "We've done that and it works. It's working quite well for us. I'm tickled to death with what I've done."

By switching to the farm market, the Pugh's have reduced the amount of labor-intensive tomatoes they grow from 60,000 plants five years ago to about 10,000 plants this spring. They also stopped growing peppers, green beans, cantaloupe and cabbage, and began growing more sweet corn and pumpkins.

"Sweet corn is a lot easier to handle and requires less labor than tomatoes," Pugh said. "Plus, the planting and harvesting time is more spread out to allow a steady supply of corn throughout the summer. We start planting corn the end of March and won't stop until July 4. That way we'll have corn ready for market from about June 20 through the end of September."

Through the market, they also offer fresh eggs from the family's range chickens and annual flowers and perennial plants from their greenhouse.

They buy cantaloupe, green beans, squash, potatoes, cabbage, cucumbers, watermelon, apples, and other fruits and vegetables grown by other area farmers so they have a variety of things available. The market is complemented by a corn maze in the fall, along with a straw pyramid, fall decorations, and other items. They plan to add hayrides this fall.

"It was awfully hard to change. I was scared to death," Pugh said. "I was used to doing things in a big scale with the tomatoes, and it was hard to change my habits."

The purpose of the Farm Profitability Tour Series is to help Ohio farm families improve the profitability and sustainability of their farming operations. The farms being toured are good examples of entrepreneurs that have taken advantage of new opportunities through alternative enterprises, different marketing methods, and alternative production systems, said Eric Barrett, agriculture and natural resources agent at the Washington County office of Ohio State University Extension.

"Traditional commodities such as corn, soybeans, and wheat aren't that profitable right now, so these tours can show people how to switch to direct marketing, add an alternative commodity, or do something else unique to help become more profitable," Barrett said. "There is more than one way of making money farming, so why not try something different?"

A packet of information also has been created for tour participants to take home that discusses the topics demonstrated on the tours and how others can try them, he said. The seven areas emphasized are trends in agriculture and what will be profitable in the future; what is marketing; how to add value to an operation; developing a market; what makes an operation profitable and how long until profitability can be achieved; what is available on the family, personal, and community levels to make a change possible; and what is the next step needed to actually implement a new commodity, practice, or marketing style.

The packet will be handed out and various aspects of it discussed at each tour stop, Barrett said.

"A lot of the ideas we've implemented here got their start from traveling and talking with other people at meetings and events," Pugh said. "It was the best time I ever spent. So people should be encouraged to come to these tours. It might help them drastically."

The tour series is sponsored by the Ohio State University Farm Income Enhancement Program, the Ohio State University Extension Sustainable Agriculture Team, the Ohio State University Extension East District Farm Profitability Committee, Innovative Farmers of Ohio, the Ohio Ecological Food and Farm Association, and the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service.

Stream MAP OF Pennsylvania

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor.

The map is also known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers.

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible--a map that shows every stream and lake. He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 x 5 foot map.

The map sold extremely well--until it was lost several years later. Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill.

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession. Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key.

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true. Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Holding an updated map, Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Why every fisherman needs this map

It is estimated that 10% of all the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into... there's a sure way to up your odds... simply try new fishing waters. Fish where few fishermen ever fish.

Pennsylvania is loaded with great fishing waters...many of them overlooked. From the Lake Erie tributaries to the Delaware River...thousands of miles of streams, lakes and rivers are now easy-to-locate on one map.

Professor Higbee's Stream Map of Pennsylvania is the first and only highly detailed map of its kind. This 3 foot by 5 foot color map shows virtually all of the 45,000 miles of Pennsylvania streams plus

FSA Accepts Crop Reports

YORK (York Co.) — The York County Farm Service Agency (FSA) is accepting 2000 crop acreage reports.

The 1996 Farm Bill removed the acreage report requirement in most cases for country farmers to remain eligible for USDA benefits. However, the commodity loan program and loan deficiency payment program still requires timely filed acreage reports by those who wish to pledge stored commodities as collateral for these nine-month loans.

Producers interested in reporting must visit the county office, review aerial photographs, and indicate the location of their crops. The York County office is located at 120 Pleasant Acres Road in York and is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Appointments are encouraged.

Call ahead to have the aerial photos mailed to you to mark at home. This will significantly reduce time spent in the office.

Final certification date is July 17 for corn, soybeans, fruit and vegetables.

Noninsurable Crops May Be Eligible For Disaster Assistance

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program is available for those crops that cannot be insured under the catastrophic coverage offered through the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation.

Following a major crop loss, it provides benefits similar to those provided for insurable crops by the catastrophic level of crop insurance protection.

The program operates at no cost to producers. Payments can be made only when an area-wide disaster occurs. This area criterion may change sometime in the future.

Payments can be made after crop loss in an approved area is greater than 35 percent of the expected area yield, and an individual producer has more than a 50 percent loss of his approved yield. Producers must file an acreage report before the deadline, or they will not be eligible for payments, no matter how severe the disaster. July 15, 2000 is the deadline to report these crops. Producers also must report losses within 15 days of the occurrence of the natural disaster or when damage to the crop becomes apparent. There is no cost for signing up for NAP.

Eligible crops are those for which crop insurance is not available and are commercially grown for food and fiber. Also included are floriculture, Christmas trees, turfgrass sod, and industrial crops. It does not include trees grown for wood, paper, or pulp products.

Payments are limited to $100,000 to eligible producers. A producer is eligible when it is determined that a conservation plan designed by the Natural Resources Conservation Service is in place. Also, qualifying gross income cannot exceed $2 million. If a notice of loss is filed beyond the applicable period, it is considered late filed and shall only be determined acceptable if the crop acreage can be inspected to verify the damage or extent of damage caused by the disaster condition.

Production evidence should accompany the Notice of Loss/Application for payment. An appraisal by an FSA representative may be required to determine production loss.

Report your crops to the Farm Service Agency. Notify the Farm Service Agency of losses incurred as soon as the condition is known. The Lancaster County Farm Service Agency is located at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster PA 17601.

NFU President Speaks To World Farmers Congress

AURORA, Col. — "Farmers and the Food Chain" was the topic of National Farmers Union (NFU) President Lelaud Swenson's address to farm organization leaders from 50 organizations at the 34th International Federation of Agricultural Producers (IFAP) World Farmers' Congress recently in Hannover, Germany.

Swenson told the group he feels there is a misconception that the world's farmers and ranchers will see economic prosperity through trade liberalization and the elimination of domestic supports.

"The income crisis in agriculture is not caused by subsidies," he said. "The market is failing farmers! It is failing all around the world. It is failing to return a fair and adequate share of the consumer dollar to farmers; failing to allocate to farmers a reasonable return on labor, management, and equity from the agrifood system's huge revenue system."

The NFU leader explained that market failure is predictable. He said it is a direct result of dramatic market power imbalances between agrifood industry multinational corporations and the family farmers that must do business with these firms.

"Industrial concentration is an issue for farmers and ranchers throughout the world. It is also an issue for consumers," Swenson said. "A major concern about concentration in the food system focuses on the control exercised by a handful of firms over decision-making throughout the food system."

He explained that the system is becoming more complex with the involvement in biotechnology, extending through production and ending with a highly processed food. Acquisition is still a common method of combining two or more firms, but mergers, joint ventures, partnerships, contracts, and less formalized relationships are also used. "These 'clusters of firms' control the food system from 'gene to supermarket shelf," said Swenson.

In a food chain cluster, the food product is passed along from stage-to-stage, but ownership never changes and neither does the decision-making. The farmer becomes a grower, proving the labor and often some of the capital, but never owns the product and never makes major management decisions.

Using information from "Consolidation in the Food and Agriculture System" by Dr. William Heffernan of the University of Missouri and "The Farm Crisis, EU Subsidies and Agribusiness Power" by the National Farmers Union of Canada, Swenson told the group, "The loss of family farmers and ranchers because of the economic crisis, a result of low commodity prices and higher production costs does not affect the volume of production. It does affect the economic viability of businesses in rural communities, results in the depopulation of rural communities, forces consolidation of education systems and the loss of access to local health care services."

Swenson concluded his remarks saying, "In the USA, the top five food retailers control over 45 percent of the retail food on a national basis — even more on a regional basis as not all of the top five operate nationally. What do farmers expect from the food chain? 1) A fair and just price for the commodities they produce; 2) A fair, open and competitive market; 3) Leadership by farm organizations that are concerned about their members' economic future."

The World Farmers' Congress is a unique event which brings together the leaders of national farmers' organizations from throughout the world every two years.

West Nile Virus Infection Threatens Horses

Jonathan Palmer, VMD, DACVIM
Associate Professor of Medicine
New Bolton Center, School of Veterinary Medicine
University of Pennsylvania

West Nile Virus (WNV) primarily causes disease in birds and is usually spread by a mosquitoes, but it occasionally causes disease in horses.

Horses become infected with WNV by the bit of a mosquito which previously (at least six to 10 days earlier) fed on a bird infected with WNV. Infection does not always cause clinical disease in horses.

In the recent outbreak of WNV on Long Island, N.Y., as many as a third of the horses on the outbreak farms may have been infected but only 14 percent developed disease.

When horses have clinical signs, the disease can be very serious. Half of the clinically affected horses on Long Island died or were euthanized. This is the only outbreak of WNF in horses ever reported in North America, but the disease in horses has been frequently reported in Europe and Africa with similar results.

Horses with West Nile Fever can have a variety of clinical signs. They may have a mild flu-like syndrome with fever, depression, listlessness, and occasionally somnolence. When fever occurs, it may be biphasic, with the early fever associated with mild flu-like signs and a second fever a week later associated with the onset of more serious neurologic signs.

Some cases will develop muscle fasciculations and an unusual muzzle twitching. They may show more serious neurologic signs including incoordination and ataxia (stumbling), circling, aimless wandering, head pressing, and hyperexcitability followed by convulsions, coma, and death.

In some outbreaks a progressive hind limb paresis (incoordination, ataxia, stumbling) progressing to complete hind limb paralysis (inability to rise behind) and finally front leg involvement is reported as typical. Simultaneously, brain signs will be progressive (depression, somnolence or hyperexcitability, convulsions, coma). Death may occur within five to 10 days of development of serious signs in half of the cases. The other half will recover with the most dramatic improvement within three weeks.

West Nile virus is primarily transmitted between birds by mosquitoes. Occasionally virus-carrying mosquitoes will bit mammals exposing them.

The Veterinary Services section of Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS)/ USDA has concluded, based on experimental inoculations carried out on horses, that horses are not involved in the transmission cycle on WNV. That is, horses are terminal hosts because they do not maintain a sufficient viremia to infect mosquitoes or other mammals (see the USDA Website at http://www.aphis.usda.gov/vs/ep/WNV/).

Previous studies in horses support this conclusion. This means, as stated by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, (see the CDC Website at http://www.cdc.gov/ncidod/dvbid/arbor/West—Nile—QA.htm) that infected horses will not transmit WNV to other horses or to people. So an infected horse is not a threat to other horses in contact with it and people cannot contract West Nile Fever by caring for an infected horse. However, special care should be taken when handling blood, spinal fluid, or nervous tissue from suspect animals, since these may contain virus.

The virus has not yet been identified in Pennsylvania or Delaware; however it has been found in birds in New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, and in one bird in Maryland (see USDA Website for a map). The virus is introduced into an area through infected birds.

In the outbreak last fall, some infected birds developed neurologic signs such as ataxia (loss of coordination), tremors, abnormal head posture, circling, and convulsions followed by death. The appearance of dead birds in an area may be an early warning that the virus is present. When handling dead birds that may have died from WNV infection, care should be taken.

There is no evidence that people can catch this disease from dead birds, but the Center for Disease Control and Prevention recommends that no one should ever touch any dead animal barehanded. Call your local health department for proper procedures for handling of dead birds.

How can horses be protected from WNV infection if the virus enters the area? The key is mosquito control to stop the bird-mosquito infection cycle. The primary mosquito vector is Culex spp. This mosquito spends its entire life within a range of about 1,000 yards. Thus local control can be very effective in stopping WNV transmission.

The most effective method of mosquito control is to destroy the mosquito larval habitat. Culex mosquitoes can breed in any puddle that lasts more than four days. So it is important to reduce the amount of standing water available for breeding such as water troughs (should be cleaned at least once or twice a week), water buckets not in use, plastic wading pools, bird baths, wheelbarrows, clogged roof gutters, discarded tires, tin cans, plastic containers, ceramic pots, or any water-holding container.

Although less effective than preventing mosquito breeding, efforts to limit the horse's exposure to adult mosquitoes can also be attempted. Horses should be stabled inside during peak mosquito feeding times which are dusk and dawn. Also, insect repellent approved for horses can be used (always follow label instructions).

CASHS Team Participates In Pa. Envirothon

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Penncrest High School, Delaware County, has won the 17th Annual Envirothon and will represent Pennsylvania at the National Envirothon in Nova Scotia, Canada, July 31-Aug. 6.

The 13th National Canon Envirothon will be at Acadia University in Wolfville, Nova Scotia, Canada. Pennsylvania has won the national event in 1988, 1989, 1994, and 1997.

"The Pennsylvania Envirothon program is an essential part of our students' environmental education," Department of Environmental Protection Secretary James Seif said. "Pennsylvania students learn about the environment, ways to care for it, what to do to protect it, and, ultimately, gain respect for nature."

More than 300 high school students from 62 counties participated in this year's Envirothon, representing more than 500 school districts, 61 conservation districts, and Philadelphia County. The annual event was May 25 at Shawnee State Park, Bedford County.

Placing 17th overall in the competition from Franklin County, the team members from Chambersburg Area Senior High School (CASHS) include Tyler Black, Greg Hershey, Seasons Suders, Matt Booher, and Tom Harwood. The team's faculty adviser is Eddie Parsons.

This team won first place at the local Envirothon competition at Cowans Gap State Park on April 26 sponsored by the Franklin County Conservation District. The District's Environmental Education Coordinator Donna Hays plans the event locally with Fulton County Conservation District's Coordinator Karen Kelly.

The Envirothon tests students' knowledge of environmental resources and their relation to each other and human activities. Students in grades nine through 12 complete exercises in aquatics, forestry, soils, wildlife, and a current environmental issue. The 2000 current issue was wetlands management.

Technical expertise for the Envirothon is provided by the Department of Environmental Protection, the Department of Conservation and Natural Resources, the Pennsylvania Game Commission, the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission, and the USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service.

Top Equestrians Return to Harrisburg Oct. 12-21 For 55th Annual Pa. National Horse Show

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania National Horse Show, one of Pennsylvania's premier sporting events and America's largest indoor all-breed horse show, will conduct its 55th annual 10-day competition here Oct. 12-21.

Since its inception in 1945, the event at Harrisburg's State Farm Show Arena, has raised more than $1.4 million for youth literacy, educational, and recreational programs through the Harrisburg Kiwanis Youth Foundation.

Each year, hundreds of thousands of hunter, jumper, and equitation riders across the U.S. compete year-long for an invitation to join the best of the best at "The Show of Champions" in Harrisburg.

The Pennsylvania National Horse Show is a celebration of horse sports, featuring more than 1,400 of America's top horses and riders, unique entertainment, shopping, food, and family fun.

Eight national championships are decided at the PNHS. The American Horse Shows Association/Black Entertainment Television National Junior Jumper Championship, Saturday night, Oct. 14, is one of only three USA Junior Olympics-Equestrian events, and features America's top under-18 jumper riders.

More than 200 young riders culminate a year of competition on Sunday, Oct. 15, as they vie for the American Horse Show Association/Eisers and Pessoa National Hunter Seat Equitation Medal Championship — one of the few events where the rider, rather than the horse, is judged.

Many of the young national champions go on to represent the U.S. in international and Olympic Grand Prix competition of the type featured at the PNHS nightly Tuesday, Oct. 17 through closing Saturday, Oct. 21. Spectators thrill to America's best Grand Prix jumper riders, including Olympic competitors, striving to win more than $115,000 in prize money by clearing jumps up to five-feet high and six-feet wide.

A week of varied equestrian competition begins Monday, Oct. 16, with Hunt Night, an evening of friendly rivalry for the mid-Atlantic's top foxhunting clubs. For about 150 years, foxhunting has remained a strong tradition in Pennsylvania, home to more hunts than any other state except Virginia.

Teams and individuals test their hunting skills over fences, in a Parade of Hounds, the North American Fox Hunting Horn Blowing Championships, and in races over fences for feisty and adorable Jack Russell terriers. Author Rita Mae Brown, a foxhunting enthusiast, is expected to make an appearance during Hunt Night.

Spectators will be treated to an amazing variety of equestrian athleticism. High-flying Grand Prix jumpers, fiery, high-stepping American Saddlebreds and their tiny Hackney pony cousins, thundering draft horses in hitches of one to six, easy-going western pleasure horses, and roadster horses and ponies who race around the ring at top speed take turns delighting and entertaining the audience. The $50,000 Budweiser Grand Prix de Penn National, the show's richest and most prestigious event Saturday night, Oct. 21, will be taped for broadcast on ESPN.

"The Sport of Kings" will thrill spectators as teams from Harrisburg and Lancaster play a heart-pounding chukker of fast-paced arena polo, Wednesday night, Oct. 18. Always a crowd favorite, Jack Russell terriers race over fences Monday and Friday nights, Oct. 16 and 20. And champion reiner Rocky Dare will present a demonstration of the newest equestrian sport to be sanctioned by the Federation Equestre Internationale (FEI).

Special family days at the horse show are Saturday, Oct. 14 and Friday night, Oct. 20. On both days, when competition and events are geared to kids, children will enjoy free pony rides and face painting. On Saturday, Oct. 14, one child under age 12 is admitted free with a paying adult.

An individual class for local therapeutic riders will be held Tuesday night, Oct. 17. Horse babies one-year-old and younger will be showcased in a futurity for young American Saddlebred horses Saturday afternoon, Oct. 21. The Valley Forge Military Academy and College Band will appear at the horse show on Saturday night, Oct. 21, as it has done for the last 52 years.

More than 50 boutiques travel from Palm Beach, Aspen, and points in between to display their jewelry, crafts, clothing, gifts and horse equipment and give spectators an early start on their Christmas shopping.

The show begins about 8 a.m. daily, and runs until about 8:30 p.m. Oct. 12, 6 p.m. Oct. 15, and until about 11 p.m. Oct. 13-14 and 16-21. General admission is $10, $5 for seniors and children ages 12 and under, except Oct. 21, when all general admission tickets are $10. Reserved seating is available Grand Prix Night, Saturday, Oct. 21; prices range from $15 to $25. All performance passes with reserved seating Oct. 21 are $100.

SE8 In Stock

The Rhino® SE8 is an economical rotary mower designed to help maintain larger acreages of grass, weeds, stalks, or material up to 1" in diameter.

The streamlined, close-coupled design allows economical operation on tractors as small as 30 horsepower on the SE8 and 45 horsepower on the SE10. The 85 HP center gearbox and 60 HP outboard gearboxes are protected from sudden shockloads by a slip clutch on the main driveline and torque dampeners on the side driveshafts. Pan blade carriers help the unit glide over field obstacles and updraft blades with a 4" blade overlap provide a clean cut

JAY•LOR® Vertical Feed Mixers

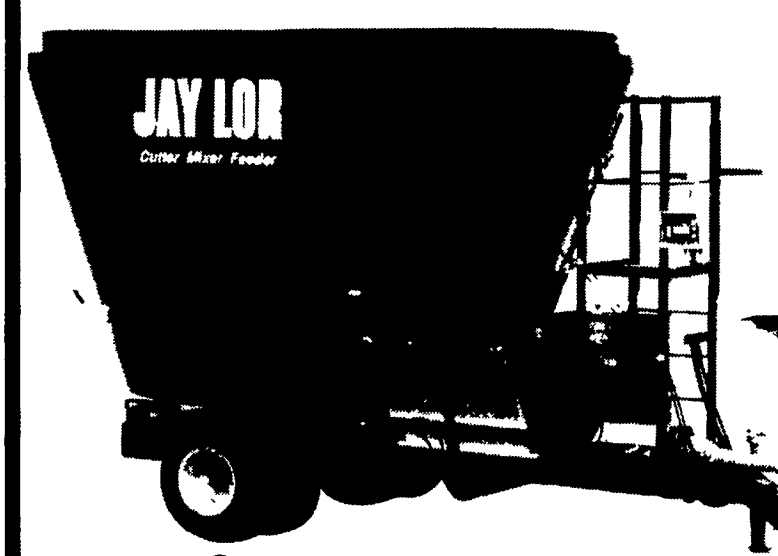
In Stock Call For Demo



JAY•LOR® 2700 Trailer Model 700 cu. ft.

AUGER
Loading the mixer is simple, since the top of the mixer is completely open. There are no support bars to obstruct feed. Simply load bales and other commodities in the top of the mixer. The unique vertical auger cuts and mixes the ration up through the centre of the mixing chamber, and then down the sides, resulting in a gentle, total mix.
The tungsten carbide steel knives are mounted on the auger, and accurately cut the ration, retaining valuable nutrients. Gentle action inside the mixing chamber ensures long life with limited wear and maintenance. The "round tub" eliminates virtually all pressure and wear, with no corners for feed to get bunched in. The auger turns slowly, to allow for complete cutting, without grinding or tearing materials

Low Horsepower requirement

WITH THE ABILITY to handle bales of any size and moisture content, JAY•LOR mixers put the "Total" into T.M.R. Virtually all feedstuffs, including corn silage, haylage, grains, and concentrates are gently cut and mixed into a palatable total mixed ration. JAY•LOR mixers are designed with few moving parts, utilizing heavy duty components.

7 Models Available From 450 Cu. Ft. to 1,040 Cu. Ft.

A university study done in 1998 shows that JAY•LOR mixers deliver more consistency and uniformity, throughout the beginning, middle and end of every mix.

Big capacity. Uniform chop.

No other forage harvesters give you best-in-class capacity and chop quality. Only the new FP230 forage harvesters from New Holland.

- Rugged 1,000-rpm driveline matches higher-horsepower tractors. Use the FP230 with tractors up to 225 PTO hp.
- Massive 12-knife cutterhead produces a uniform length of cut from 3/16" to 1-5/16" with four knives.
- Knife sharpening and shearbar adjustment are easy to keep cutting performance at its best.
- Optional on-board Crop-Pro™ crop processor makes feed more digestible and saves the expense and time of using a stationary roller mill.
- Optional Metalert® III electronic metal detector gives you peace of mind.

Rake Two Windrows At Once In Virtually Any Ground Contour

LITCHFIELD, Ill. — Carted-style V-rakes recently introduced by Worksaver, Inc. are ideal for raking two windrows at once or for gathering tedded or mown crop into a windrow.

Featuring raking wheels that are mounted on oscillating arms, the economical rakes follow almost any ground contour, allowing them to be used in most terrain. The carted rakes also feature a hydraulic lift system that allows the operator to lift the rakes into transport position from the tractor seat.

The rakes are available in two models, WR-8 and WR-10SE. Both models fold into transport position making it easy to move from field to field.

Model WR-8 features eight raking wheels and has a working width of 20 feet. Model WR-10SE has 10 raking wheels and a working width of 23 feet. The end wheels on this model can be folded to convert to an eight-wheel rake, providing additional flexibility in movement and use.

Both models feature 195-70/15 tires. They are available with an optional kicker wheel kit.

ABS Hosts Dairy Press Tour

DEFOREST, Wis. — Five journalists from around the world visited ABS Global as part of the National Association of Animal Breeders (NAAB) Dairy Press Tour June 9.

The NAAB annual tour provides participants with information on the U.S. dairy cattle industry from several different sources and tours the U.S. from coast to coast to get a "hands-on" understanding of the dairy farming situation.

While at ABS, the participants received a tour of the facilities and a presentation about what makes ABS different from other A I organizations in the U.S. and internationally.

"Having a variety of nationalities represented by the journalists on the tour provided ABS with an excellent opportunity to explain its programs and help others understand the changing dairy industry in the U.S.," said Michael Randolph, chief marketing officer at ABS Global.

Participating in the tour were press representatives from Italy, Mexico, Holland, Brazil, and the United Kingdom. The group was eager to learn about ABS' operations and asked many questions with an emphasis on the systems approach to service.

Land O'Lakes Expands Swine Research Efforts

ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — Swine research at the Land O'Lakes Answer Farm in Fort Dodge, Iowa, has an expanded, even international, perspective, thanks to the work of Honduran native, Dr. Brenda de Rodas, and an additional connection with Cooperative Research Farms (CRF).

In October 1999, Dr. de Rodas was named lead research scientist for the Land O'Lakes Swine Research Program. De Rodas is responsible for overseeing Land O'Lakes swine research activities and applies her knowledge of different feed ingredients and the nutrition requirements of swine to accomplish Land O'Lakes research objectives. She originates research concepts, is involved with experimental design and data analysis, writes and presents protocols and final research reports, and is involved in facility management.

The Land O'Lakes Swine Research facility consists of a 145-sow, farrow-to-finish operation that includes gestation, farrowing and finishing facilities, as well as three nurseries and one pig milk unit.

Raised on a farm, de Rodas became interested in agriculture at an early age. She earned a bachelor's degree in agronomic engineering from the National University of Honduras in 1982. She then worked with the Agriculture Department of Honduras, where she developed an interest in swine.

While working for the Honduran Agriculture Department, de Rodas received a scholarship to pursue a master's degree in animal science at Oklahoma State University. Since receiving that degree, de Rodas has traveled back and forth between Honduras and the U.S., receiving her doctorate in animal nutrition from Oklahoma State University in 1994, and gaining postdoctoral experience as a research associate at Oklahoma State University and the University of Arkansas.

During her time as a research associate at Oklahoma State University and the University of Arkansas, de Rodas participated in multidisciplinary research programs that involved coordinating with private industry, as well as with other on-campus and off-campus research centers. De Rodas began working with the Land O'Lakes Answer Farm as a consultant in August 1998.

NCGA Announces Checkoff-Supported Development To Boost Ethanol Industry

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has announced another corn checkoff-supported development that will boost the entire ethanol industry. An agreement has been reached for the degermination host site at the Aberdeen, S.D., facility of Heartland Grain Fuels, LP.

Heartland Grain Fuels is a partnership between the South Dakota Wheat Growers Cooperative, one of the largest in the state of South Dakota, and Farmland Industries. The host plant has been operating since 1993, and is one of the prototype dry grind ethanol plants that have become very common as ethanol expanded in the 1900s.

Degermination is the process of separating germs before fermentation in the ethanol production process, allowing plants to process more corn, more efficiently.

"Once again, checkoff-supported research is paying off in a way that will benefit corn growers and the ethanol industry," said NCGA president-elect Lee Klein of Battle Creek, Neb. "NCGA is very pleased to announce this agreement with Heartland Grain Fuels."

The goal of NCGA's degermination project is to determine the commercial feasibility of the degermination process and to define the benefits of the process to dry mill operations.

"If successful, this will offer new profitability opportunities for local plants across the Corn Belt," said Klein. "Degerm could add value from 20 cents to 35 cents per bushel of corn processed to ethanol and an additional potential to growers of value added from speciality oil traits."

The project is midway through the pre-engineering phase and information is being assembled to move to the process engineering phase. This project has received targeted checkoff funding from the Illinois Corn Marketing Board, the Iowa Corn Promotion Board's Market Development Committee, the Corn Marketing Program of Michigan, and the Nebraska Board.

Model RT-210 delivers a 10-foot working width and a transport width of eight-foot nine-inches. This model features two rotors each with six arms. It requires 15 HP to pull. Tire size is 3.50-6.

Models RT-417 and RT-417H feature four rotors each with six arms.

Gov. Ridge Signs Bill To Give Pa. Farmers Additional Crop-Loss Payment

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Gov. Tom Ridge recently signed Senate Bill 1417 to allow the Department of Agriculture to make final crop-loss payments to producers who qualified under Act 57, the drought disaster relief law signed into law last year.

"Our farmers exemplify the best of Pennsylvania," Gov. Ridge said. "They work hard, and they don't ask for much in return. I was proud last year to sign legislation offering our farmers the largest state drought-aid package in the nation. And, today, I'm proud to help them again — as they continue to recover from last year's devastating drought.

"With this new law, our Department of Agriculture will be able to complete the job. We will send a final payment to qualified applicants, in an amount that will be nearly equal to what they already have received."

Gov. Ridge thanked Sen. Noah W. Wenger (R-Lancaster) and Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr. (R-Montgomery) for supporting this bill.

Last year, Pennsylvania provided more drought assistance for Pennsylvania farmers ($5 million for hay assistance, $5.6 million for crop insurance, and $60 million in crop-loss payments for a total of $70.6 million in state funds) than in any other Mid-Atlantic or Northeastern state.

These final payments reflect the balance of the $60 million portion of the existing disaster relief package.

The $5.6 million portion of the package designated for crop insurance assistance will be administered directly through insurance underwriters and the federal Risk Management Agency. The Department of Agriculture has arranged to have the producers' crop insurance billing statement reflect the state assistance, eliminating the need for producers to be reimbursed.

"I am very proud of our producers for managing through a very difficult crop year," Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. said. "Likewise, I thank Gov. Ridge and Pennsylvania lawmakers for quickly responding with $70.6 million in state assistance. This financial assistance has made a difference to our farm families. It has helped them to protect the viability of Pennsylvania's agricultural community and its capacity to produce food and fiber."

SB 1417, sponsored by Sen. William L. Slocum (R-Warren), passed the House 189 to 1, and the Senate unanimously. It takes effect immediately.

Glickman Details Plans For $30 Million To Help Sheep, Lamb Farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary Dan Glickman announced recently that sheep and lamb producers will receive a total of $30 million in direct cash payments to help improve their production efficiency and the marketability of lamb meat.

Sign-up for the program started June 19, 2000. This is part of the Clinton Administration's three-year $100 million assistance plan to help U.S. sheep and lamb farmers.

Poor market conditions and record low prices have caused major losses for America's sheep and lamb producers during the last several years. This step is designed to bring immediate financial assistance to those who need it most.

During the first year of the program — July 22, 1999 to September 30, 2000 — payments may be made for rams, sheep improvement, and facility improvement. Year one involves payments for Rams at $100 per head, limited to $2,500; sheep enrolled in an eligible sheep improvement program at 50 cents per head, limited to $500; and sheep facility improvement at 20 percent of cost, limited to $2,500.

The maximum combined payment per farm is $5,500, according to the interim final rule for the program that was published in the Federal Register June 21, 2000. Sheep and lamb farmers whose gross income for 1999 was greater than $2.5 million are not eligible for payments.

For years two and three, farmers are eligible for payments of $3 for each feeder lambs, and $8 for each slaughter lamb marketed during the June 1-July 31 period. There will be no maximum payments or herd limits during years two and three of the program. However, feeder lamb producers who gross income for 2000 or 2001 exceed $2.5 million are not eligible for payment.

The Lancaster County Farm Service Agency (FSA) is accepting applications for year one. The FSA is located at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster PA 17601.

Congressman Demands Sound Science In Dredging Upper Hudson Valley

GLENMONT, N.Y. — Farmers and rural landowners of the Upper Hudson River appreciate Congressman John Sweeney's recent actions to oppose the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) dredging of the Hudson River without the results of a study on the risks associated with dredging.

New York Farm Bureau, the state's largest general farm advocacy organization, joins Congressman Sweeney in encouraging EPA to delay dredging until completion of a National Academy of Sciences (NAS) study that would make comprehensive, science-based recommendations regarding remediation technology for contaminated sediments.

"Farm Bureau thanks Congressman Sweeney for supporting the use of sound science when addressing the ecological and environmental needs of this state," said John W. Lincoln, president of New York Farm Bureau. "With the NAS study being concluded in September, it is a short amount of time to wait to ensure that factual data is presented to the residents of the Hudson Valley."

The proposed dredging of the Hudson River could involve the removal of 1.5 to 2 million cubic yards of sediment and could take between 15 and 20 years to complete. The sediment to be removed would more than likely be relocated on the fields of dairy farmers in the area. With insufficient data to back the successfulness of this project, EPA is continuing to raise doubts in the public's eye regarding their decision-making process.

"Sound science is the way to go," said Lincoln. "We are grateful for Congressman Sweeney's initiative to stand up for the farmers in his district that would be severely impacted by this quick and politically-based decision."

SNYDER CO. OWNER SAYS SELL. This dairy farm is ideal for beef, sheep, goats and or dairy again The cropland is ideal for produce The farm produce auction close by makes this a viable use The farm house is large and is a 4 or 5 bedroom home with a modern kitchen and pantry Wildlife abounds and the area is semi-private Owner says he'll consider a reasonable offer with quick possession

TIOGA CO. - The last farm in the upper counties I have left All the others are SOLD and have happy owners This farm was poultry and hog but let your imagination go to work This farm has great potential for veal, U-Store-It or go back to poultry Broilers or high rise layers Maybe even Breeder flocks The income from Breeder stock is very lucrative The price is open to any reasonable offer with immediate possession

SCHUYLKILL CO. - This small acreage farm has a modern veal and broiler operation with a new contract with Vineland Kosher for the broilers and the veal contract is ongoing The owner says sell now, he will consider a reasonable offer He's moving to Eastern Bradford and has a farm picked out School bells will soon be ringing again and the motivation is great This one is a good money maker You won't need an outside job The home is real nice and has a large living-rec room

My needs list continues to grow. I have waiting buyers for Union, Snyder, Lancaster, Lebanon, Perry, Juniata, Berks and most any central PA Counties. Buyers for mountain land, cabins, large tracts with or without buildings. I need a large 250 to 300 acre dairy below Williamsport.
